Their $2,000,000 goal at last in sight, officials of the Community Chest campaign yesterday gathered their forces for a last-minute drive to make certain no needy person will go unaided in Washington next year for lack of funds.

Yesterday's checkup of campaign results showed the quota nine-tenths filled. By the time the drive ends Tuesday, leaders hope to have the last $185,000.

Drive headquarters are being maintained at the Willard Hotel for the convenience of keymen and contributors who have not yet made their pledges.

Keymen of the Government Unit drew attention to the week-end Federal payday and urged their fellow solicitors to secure all possible pledges before the final report luncheon Tuesday.

A. G. Neal, chairman of the Group Solicitation Unit, also asked his workers to redouble their efforts.

Officials at drive headquarters said the number of telephone inquiries and personal calls by willing donors indicated encouraging final reports.

President Said To Want Dies' Funds Cut Off

Friends Assert He Would Bring End To Embarrassments

By George Bookman.
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt is inquiring among associates to learn whether a sufficiently strong bloc of House members can be organized to defeat a requested appropriation for continuance of the Dies Committee on un-American Activities, it was learned last night.

This information came shortly after Representative Martin Dies, of Texas, chairman of the committee, had emerged from a 50-minute conference with the President, declaring "I am going to do the job that Congress gave us to do," but refusing to comment on the interview.

The Orange (Tex.) Representative has asked an appropriation of $1,000,000 for his committee next year.

Friends of President Roosevelt told The Post that the Chief Executive believes the committee has served its usefulness, that it is now becoming embarrassing to the law enforcement agencies of the Government.

Dies was called to the White House from his Texas home in a Presidential effort to settle disputes that have arisen between Dies and the Justice Department over methods to be used to track down saboteurs and Fifth Columnists.

As the President's views were described to The Post, he feels that since publication of Dies' White Book on Nazi trade plans and Red Book or Communist doctrines, national sentiment has turned against Dies.

The President was said to discern a trend of public and editorial opinion setting against the latter's activities.

After conferring with Mr. Roosevelt, Dies predicted there would not be more than 13 votes against his appropriation request in the House.

Of the talk with the President, he said simply: "It was satisfactory to me."

He said there had been "no intimation" of any change in committee policies.

25 Miners Feared Dead In Ohio Blast

Rock Falls Impede Rescue Crews' Work; Men Caught 2 Miles From Exit Shaft

By the Associated Press

Cadiz, Ohio, Nov. 29.—Blast-made rock falls tonight slowed down rescue crews as fears mounted for the lives of 25 to 27 coal miners trapped far underground in Ohio's deepest shaft mine.

Officials of the Ohio & Pennsylvania Coal Co., operators of the mine eight miles northeast of here, said a recheck showed between 25 and 27 men in the blast area.

They estimated rescuers would not reach the miners before 7 or 9 a. m. tomorrow.

At 11:15 p. m., ten hours after the blast, Nelson Hovey, assistant State director of industrial relations, said, "it looks very dark."

Caught without warning by a devastating explosion 466 feet underground and 2 miles from an exit shaft, workers in section "12 north" were cut off from escape by deadly gas and tons of rock, coal and earth.

No Body Found

Reports of miners that one body had been located later proved unfounded, after company officials rechecked with rescuers.

Adolph Pacifico, district United Mine Workers' vice president, said the trapped men had only "one chance"—that was by reaching a finished mine room.

Company officials reported there were about 130 men working when the accident occurred in this mine which has been operating at capacity and employing 500 daily. It is Ohio's fourth largest.

Nothing Heard From Men

"We haven't heard a thing from the men," said a company spokesman here. "Rescue crews are working as fast as conditions will permit toward the scene in section 'North 12.'"

E. H. Snider, assistant manager of the company's Cleveland headquarters, declared "we don't know whether they are alive or dead."

Protected by masks from mine gas—listed tentatively as the blast cause—expert rescue crews, aided by local miners, worked feverishly to clear a way to the entombed men.

Snider was unable to advance a cause for the explosion, but observed that the rich coal mining country in the vicinity of Cadiz "is dotted with oil and gas."

Second Disaster in Nine Months

The accident was the second serious Ohio mine disaster in nine months. The worst blast in the State's history occurred March 16 at nearby Willow Grove, killing 27 men.

As night fell, scores of small fires lighted the hilly area, warming anxious relatives and friends who braved freezing weather for some word of the entombed men's fate.

Ambulances from Cadiz and surrounding towns stood at one of the mine's two entrances.

J. J. Forbes of the Pittsburgh office of the United States Bureau of Mines ordered F. E. Griffith, who had been carrying on safety instruction work at the Hanna Coal Company's mine at Willow Grove, to the Cadiz mine to help direct rescue work.

R. A. F. Pounds Italian Supply Ports in Albania; Greeks Advance

By the Associated Press

Athens, Nov. 29.—The British Royal Air Force reported fierce attacks on the sea gateways through which the Italian army must draw supplies and reinforcements today, and the Greeks themselves asserted they were pressing deeper into Albania.

An R. A. F. communique covering actions yesterday and last night, said aerial attacks were carried out against Santi Quaranta (Porto Edda) and Durazzo, important Albanian ports, and Elbasani, an inland base.

Shipping was attacked at Porto Edda, and at Durazzo and Elbasani. "All the bombs fell in the target area, but the results were not observed due to weather conditions," the communique said.

The British reiterated last night's Greek claim that Italian destroyers bombarding Corfu "fled on approach of our formations."

Reports reaching Salonika added a piquant touch to the routine news of the Albanian front. These said a company of 100 Macedonian peasant women, disobeying orders, assumed the role of Amazons and helped the Greeks beat 3,000 Italian troops in the Pindus Mountains by rolling big rocks down on their enemy from lofty crags.

Serious fighting apparently was still in progress in the vicinity of Argirocastro, last remaining major Italian base in southern Albania. There were conflicting reports as to the fate of the base.

(A dispatch from Rome said that Argirocastro was still in Italian hands.

Pogradetz Captured

(From an Associated Press correspondent at Pogradetz, Albanian settlement on the northern front 30 miles north of Koritza, came the first independent verification that Pogradetz had been captured by the Greeks.

(He said Greek official communiques had been "on the conservative side both as regards Italian casualties and the amount of booty taken." He said leaders "even in this advanced post are unable to tell just how far beyond here their forces have penetrated into the wild mountains.")

The Greeks were reported consolidating their gains on the center and northern sectors to avoid stretching

Fleet Kept Italy From Crossing Tunis to Libya, British Claim

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 29.—The British navy's Mediterranean offensive apparently has broken an Italian attempt to establish new lines of communication with the Fascist African forces, informed Britons declared today, and has put Britain in substantial control of the whole of that strategic sea.

This evaluation of the meaning of the battle off Sardinia, officially said here to have damaged six Italian warships, offered one of the first direct suggestions as to the reason for the presence in that area of a Fascist fleet of such considerable size.

When the British fell upon them last Wednesday, these experts said, the Italians were attempting to create an alternate sea route to reach Libya—perhaps by way of the French territorial waters of Tunisia—and thus to reinforce and reactivate Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's long-stalled offensive in Egypt.

Met Unexpected Force

For weeks, these informants asserted, the Italians have found it impossible to make consistent and effective use of more direct routes across the Mediterranean from such bases as Taranto—itself heavily attacked by British naval bombers on November 11—and Brindisi.

This account of the circumstances of the Sardinian engagement, offered by informed Britons, had it that the Italians ran into a much bigger western Mediterranean force than they had counted upon, a force which had been able since Taranto to operate in fact as a separate naval entity.

In claiming that the whole of the Mediterranean now is under British domination these persons declared that British possession of the Greek Island of Crete has blocked the Fascists off from the Aegean and their Dodecanese Island bases as well.

Sea Offensive Under Way

All this, they declared, has at last turned the entire Mediterranean balance in British favor—a balance which was sharply upset with the French surrender because of the fact that the French navy in the early days of the war had the assignment of guarding the western end of the Mediterranean.

New Warships To Be Speeded

Sharply quickened construction of new destroyers for the United States Navy was called for by President Roosevelt yesterday.

An average reduction of six months in the construction period of the 115 destroyers ordered in September was understood to be the Administration goal.

The President told his press conference that he had referred the problem to the Defense Commission, through William S. Knudsen, commission production chief, and commented that the date originally

Flogging Ordered For Wife-Beater In Prince Georges

Convicted of beating his wife, a Prince Georges man was sentenced yesterday to be flogged by the sheriff, the first official whipping known to have been ordered in the county.

Daniel Sealock, of Capitol Heights, a large and brawny man, was convicted yesterday in county police court of what Magistrate Walter L. Green termed a "brutal and unprovoked assault" on his wife.

Sealock is "to be confined in the county jail for ten days, during which time the sheriff is to administer, within the confines of the jail walls, six lashes to the prisoner." Judge Green said he ordered less than the maximum sentence of 40 lashes and a year in jail because Sealock is the sole support of his family.

Jobless Mother Reclaims Her Abandoned Child

A 24-year-old unemployed mother walked solemnly into the Police Women's Bureau yesterday to claim the 2-week-old child she had abandoned last Wednesday.

Declining the help of social workers, she said that she had repented leaving the boy and wanted to care for him herself. She had arranged for a room in a boarding house and expected to return soon to her former position as a stenographic clerk, she said.

The child was born in Gallinger Hospital and within a few hours after mother and baby were released Wednesday afternoon he was found on the steps of St. John's Orphanage, at 1922 F Street Northwest. The baby was identified by his clothing.

British, Nazi Warships Clash In Channel Fog

Foe Put to Flight, English Say, Admitting Damage to 1 Vessel

By the United Press

London, Nov. 29.—British and German light naval forces clashed in the mist-shrouded English Channel before dawn today and exchanged damaging blows before the enemy "retired at high speed" toward the French coast with the Royal Navy harriers in pursuit.

The German warships evidently took advantage of the weather over the Channel to try to carry out a hit-run raid on shipping.

One British vessel taking part in the encounter admittedly sustained damage. The Admiralty reported that "damage was inflicted upon the enemy" but its extent was undetermined.

(Nazi spokesmen in Berlin said that two British destroyers were torpedoed in a clash with German destroyers at the western exit of the Channel.

(The same sources said another group of German destroyers off the south coast of England sank two steamers of 9,000 and 3,000 tons, respectively, along with two smaller ships. All German destroyers escaped unscathed, the spokesmen said.)

2 Merchantmen Sail, Giving Spain As Destination

By the Associated Press

Tampico, Mexico, Nov. 29.—In face of reports that British and Canadian warships await them in the Caribbean, the German merchantmen Idarwald and Rhein sailed today from their haven here with Spanish ports as their declared destinations.

On the eastern horizon as the freighters nosed out of the Panuco River into the gulf, hugging the shore, could be seen the silhouettes of three foreign warships, too distant for identification, but believed to be United States neutrality patrol vessels.

Today's departure was not without mishap. The Idarwild, it was learned, ran aground on a sandbar outside the harbor, but refloated herself unassisted. She and the Rhein slipped into the Gulf in early morning, their whistles hooting good-by, their crews on deck waving and shouting "adios!"

A Mexican gunboat, reported to be the Durango, awaited the freighters in the Gulf, charged with escorting them out of territorial waters.

Capital's Contribution

D. C.'s First Draft Call Filled Save for 10 Replacements

The District's first draft quota call neared completion last night as 11 new soldiers from Washington, and nearby Maryland and Virginia, marched into their billets at Fort George G. Meade, Md.

Arrival of the citizen recruits at the expanding Third Corps Area reception center boosted the Capital's area's selective service personnel there to 76.

Only 10 more men, replacements for those who failed to qualify physically for Army service, will be inducted before the first increment is complete. These future soldiers will be ordered up by local boards within five days from among the candidates in Class 1-A.

As the new arrivals filed into the post "checking center" other Washingtonians, Virginians and Marylanders who had gone into uniform Wednesday and Thursday were fast losing their former civilian identities as they were merged into the growing Army.

The men who arrived in the Wednesday contingent were put through aptitude tests yesterday to determine for which branch of the service they are best fitted.

On these examinations depends which mobilization points the recruits will be sent to and where they are expected to remain for their year of military training.

Meanwhile, two new local board members were appointed yesterday. They are George J. Rohrich, World War veteran and National Radio Institute radio instructor, of 4327 Iowa Avenue Northwest, and John O. Small, auto repairman, of 422 L Street Northwest. Rohrich replaces Clarence Redman, deceased member of Board No. 6, while Small assumes the duties of Thomas Amatucci, former official of Board No.

Okies' Influx to Capital Profits Neither, Tolan Inquiry Told

By James D. Secrest

Washington, chiefly because it is the Nation's Capital, is on the receiving end of the national interstate migration of job seekers, Robert E. Bondy, public welfare director, told a special House committee yesterday.

As a consequence, he added, between 200 and 500 homeless men spend winter nights standing in public buildings or at police precinct stations because the Municipal Lodging House will accommodate only 45.

Because most national defense news is published under a Washington dateline, Bondy said, workers flock to the Capital although the jobs they are seeking are elsewhere.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland noted with alarm the overcrowding in living quarters in Washington due to the failure of housing construction to keep abreast of the increase in population. Noting that 15,000 workers had been added to the Government pay roll in Washington since the national defense drive started, he said:

"This is a repetition of conditions, as yet on a smaller scale, which existed during the World War.

"Should there be an epidemic of influenza or an unusual prevalence of other respiratory diseases, the danger of spread will be multiplied unless adequate housing facilities for this group of persons are provided."

Under questioning on the transient problem, Dr. Ruhland admitted that the provisions of adequate relief would attract a greater number of transients to Washington so that a "vicious cycle" might be set in

Big Guns Speak

By the Associated Press

Ruse, Bulgaria (On the Rumanian Frontier), Nov. 29.—Artillery fire was heard late today across the Danube River from Rumania, and travelers from the Rumanian frontier village of Ciurgiu brought reports that the Antonescu government was using heavy guns to crush the Iron Guard rebellion.

Houses in Ruse were shaken and windows were cracked by the explosions. Whether they were all caused by artillery, however, could not be confirmed.

The travelers said disorders and assassinations were continuing throughout Rumania.

Hundreds Assassinated

They added that "at least a hundred" persons had been assassinated in Bucharest by berserk Iron Guardists and said there were reports in that capital that an equal number had been slain in the provinces.

The police, said these informants, clashed with Iron Guardists at Ostrov and after bloody fighting, overpowered them and arrested great numbers. At another town the guardists were said to have closed Jewish stores and kidnaped many Jews. Jewish women, it was added, were ordered to clean the streets.

In Bucharest, General Ion Antonescu, Rumania's chief of state, was reported taking no chances; German troops were said to be guarding the residences of his friends and those old regime politicians whom the guard had sworn to kill.

Fear Nazi Protectorate

Budapest, Nov. 29 (INS).—Fears that Germany may seize on the current Iron Guardist massacres as an excuse to clamp down a complete German protectorate over Rumania swept Bucharest diplomatic circles tonight, following the arrest of 500 members of the guard on charges of complicity in today's reported massacre of 2,000 Jews, according to a dispatch from the Rumanian capital.

Tension between the Iron Guard and the Rumanian army was reported at white heat, and 19-year-old King Michael was said to be fleeing the country to join Queen Mother Helen in exile.

Michael, who replaced his father, King Carol, on the throne less than two months ago, was understood to be en route to Florence, Italy.

Meanwhile, Iron Guardists poured

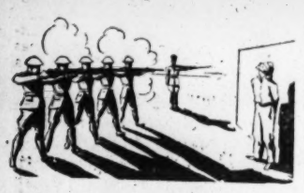
Over Our Shoulder

a pre-view of the Sunday Post

"There is no right to strike against the public safety, by anybody, anywhere, any time!" These words swept Governor Coolidge into the Vice Presidency. If the Boston police strike deserved such sweeping condemnation, are strikes in airplane factories any less to be condemned as "against the public safety" in such a year as 1940? The Post's John Oakes has studied the breaks in the National Defense Program production line, looked into their causes and the changes in policies and laws which are being proposed as cures. He tells you what he has found, in a Sunday Post article on obstructions to National Defense.



But what can we do about such obstructions? Is a man who deliberately stirs up trouble to halt defense production a traitor? In Germany—yes. In Switzerland—yes. In almost any country—yes. But in the United States the definition of treason is set forth clearly in the Constitution. You can't be a—legal—traitor in America so long as we are not at war. Frank Dennis examines the legal definition of treason and points out how far that definition lags behind present day emergencies.

Most famous of American traitors was Benedict Arnold. Were the loyalists whom he joined when he went over to the British equally to be condemned? The story of the Revolution, from the Tory viewpoint, is told in Kenneth Roberts' new book, "Oliver Wiswell," reviewed Sunday on The Post's book page. Also reviewed on Sunday's book page: "Embezzled Heaven," by Frank Werfel (author of "The Forty Days of Musa Dagh") and "Fame Is The Spur," by Howard Spring (author of "My Son, My Son").

Entirely different from the best sellers just mentioned, but offering several pleasant hours of light entertainment, is Lionel M. Mosher's "After Some Tomorrow," the Sunday Post's complete novel for tomorrow. The setting: a college campus. The time: football season. The plot: should Jeff Colt marry Maddy—who loved him and had lots of money—when he was still in love with Betty, who had chosen to marry his best friend instead?

Sounds like a problem for Mary Haworth!

A problem for Washington is the proposed pre-marriage medical test. Dr. William H. Hough is fighting it, and Gerald Gross tells why, in his "Washingtonians of the Week." Gross also introduces Dr. Juan Jose Soler, new Minister from Paraguay; Guy Pearson, just appointed D. C. tax collector; and Dr. Harry A. Millis, new chairman of the NLRB. into Bucharest by the thousands, keeping abreast of Rumanian troops bring hurried to the capital to quell possible uprising, according to the latest advices.

Premier Gen. Antonescu today conferred with several generals and decided to proclaim a military dictatorship tomorrow if there is another outbreak of Iron Guard terrorism.

Growing out of Wednesday's mass Iron Guard slaying of 64 prominent foes in Bucharest, the disorders evidently reached their worst pitch at the Danubian delta port of Galati today where bands of terrorists, bearing firearms, surrounded the large Jewish district and went about shooting down Jews at random. Two thousand Jews fell in this pogrom, according to reports reaching Budapest, which have not yet received official confirmation.

Riots in Oil District

New and serious riots were reported to have broken out in Rumania's oil district, causing grave concern among the German military authorities in the Balkan country. Vice Premier Horia Sima, official leader of the Iron Guard, conferred with the Germans at Bucharest, then rushed to the petroleum center of Ploesti, accompanied by a corps of his closest followers.

Sima was reported to have restored order in the Ploesti region after causing the summary execution of 20 ringleaders among the Iron Guard terrorists who oppose his leadership. Besides the Jews, those slain so far in Rumania's blood bath were understood to be numbered in the hundreds.

Dispatched to Bucharest by Adolf Hitler as the Fuehrer's personal emissary, Nazi Youth Leader Baldur von Schirach was reported to have been authorized to assume supreme control of the Rumanian administration in the event the Antonescu regime fails to reestablish order.

Capital in State of Siege

The Antonescu government proclaimed a state of siege and, with the aid of German army units, fastened a tight military grip on Bucharest. But Iron Guard terrorists were reported still streaming into the capital for tomorrow's memorial services for their late leader, Corneliu Codreanu. Serious trouble was expected.

The Iron Guard legionnaires, who engineered Wednesday's mass execution in the Jilava prison, marched to the Bucharest Cathedral today and offered prayers at the bier of Codreanu, who was executed with 12 followers two years ago and for whose death the radical guardists now are taking revenge.

Meanwhile, the reign of terror in Rumania's provincial towns and villages exacted the lives not only of political out also of personal enemies of Iron Guardists. The victims included magistrates, judges, landowners and merchants.

Leader's Memory Cleared

Bucharest, Rumania (Saturday), Nov. 30 (Passed by Censor).—Rumania's Iron Guardists poured into Bucharest by thousands last night and this morning for the ceremonious reburial today of Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, Iron Guard founder, and his 12 followers whose assassination exactly two years ago inspired this week's wholesale slaying by the Iron Guard.

The 13 coffins containing the bodies of M. Codreanu and his men lay in state through Friday at the Ilie Gorgani Church in Bucharest, and lines, four blocks long, formed in the drizzle as crowds shuffled into the church to stare.

At the same time funerals were held in Bucharest for some of those slain to avenge the Iron Guard executions.

Historian Jorga Slain

Dr. Juliu Maniu, the Rumanian peasant leader, appeared and spoke Friday afternoon at the funeral of former Finance Minister Virgil Madgearu, the party's secretary. Dr. Maniu also attended the funeral of Nicolas Jorga, Rumanian scholar and historian, whose riddled body was found in the village Stesnic in the Prahova district.

Reports from usually well-informed circles said tonight that government police had tracked and seized the five assassins of Jorga and that their execution was only a matter of hours.

In the meatnime, the so-called "rehabilitation process"—the retrial—of Codreanu was held Friday. The court consisted of four judges of the Rumanian high court under President Dumitru Lupu, who came to power with Premier Antonescu. Lupu resigned his chairmanship of the inquiry committee investigating the political crimes of King Carol's regime in order to preside at the retrial of Codreanu.

Horia Cosmovichi, former secretary general of the council of ministers, defended Codreanu. Public Prosecutor Coman Nevoescu expounded in a speech lasting several hours, the invalidity of the 1938 verdict.

At 9 o'clock last night the 1938 verdict was annuled. Codreanu was "acquitted" and the court decided that Codreanu's memory was "rehabilitated" by the highest court of the land.

The families of the murdered guards were present durng the session. The trial was not broadcast, as had been announced, because, the chief judge stated, "it would have dimmed the feeling of piety" occasioned by the ceremony.

Tanks Are Ready

Radu Mironovici, the legionary commander, was installed as prefect of the Bucharest police Friday, replacing Col. Stefan Zavoianu. M. Mironovici's first act was to issue an appeal for law and order (17 words censored). Four light tanks (three words censored) were posted outside police headquarters.

Reports continue to circulate that additional German "missions" were entering Rumania to enforce Premier Antonescu's demands for an end to assassinations. These reports were continuously denied, as were reports circulated by the British Broadcasting Co., that Maniu was under heavy guard. Maniu had no guard when he appeared at the funerals of Madgearu and Jorga.

(Forty words censored.) Forty-eighty generals called to place the entire army at Gen. Antonescu's disposal.

While British claims to successes in the Mediterranean were disputed in Germany and Italy an Associated Press correspondent's dispatch from Berlin reported only today that neutral observers there were expressing belief that the Mediterranean area was coming so thoroughly under British control that a new problem was being created for the Axis.

These observers, the dispatch added, were wondering how long Germany would wait before making an effort to bring that end of the war into the pattern of hard, swift success followed by the German armies in the west.

Italians Differ

On the battle of Sardinia, the Italian story made it a Fascist, and not a British, victory. Where the British had claimed hits on a 35,000-ton Italian battleship of the new Littorio class, a 10,000-ton cruiser of the Bolzano class, damage to two other cruisers and two destroyers, the official Italian news agency Stefani asserted that only a single Italian destroyer was damaged.

It was claimed that a British battleship, three cruisers and an aircraft carrier were damaged and that seven British planes were shot down. One of the cruisers hit, said the Rome radio, "appeared to have been the Renown"—a 32,000-ton vessel.

Aside from this the Italians claimed that in other and subsidiary action they had hit "a big warship" squarely with a heavy bomb; had successfully bombarded Valetta, on the British base of Malta, last night, and had sunk a 10,000-ton British transport in the Atlantic.

Hungry Winter Ahead For Italy, U. S. Reports

By the Associated Press

The British Mediterranean blockade has been so effective, the United States Agriculture Department reported yesterday, that Italy faces the winter deprived of many sorely needed foodstuffs and agricultural raw materials.

By barring the gates of the Mediterranean at Gibraltar and at Suez, Great Britain has cut off the sources of more than 80 per cent of Italy's imports, the department said.

"This blockade is so effective in stopping the flow of supplies needed by Italy," the department said, "that it has more severely disorganized the Italian economic structure than anything else the war has accomplished."

In a report on "Italian agriculture under fascism and war," the department, using confidential information said to have been obtained through diplomatic channels, told how Germany's Axis partner has resorted to strict rationing in an effort to make available supplies last as long as possible.

Great numbers of the poorer classes were said to be suffering from malnutrition, the report said.

Vessel Loading Oil for U. S. Bases Sinks at N.Y. Pier

Copyright by New York Times

New York, Nov. 29.—The freighter Yucatan, of the New York and Cuba Mail Line lying at an East River pier, tonight took a sudden list to port and sank by the stern as longshoremen loaded the vessel, which was due to sail for Puerto Rico tomorrow.

The Yucatan was carrying oil and supplies for bases recently acquired by the United States in the West Indies.

The ship, which arrived yesterday after a stormy trip from Central America, tilted to an angle of almost 45 degrees and settled with her stern in 35 feet of water and her bow high in the air.

Officials of the line declined to comment. One explanation was that a portion of the cargo had shifted in the Yucatan's hold, causing the list.

The Gallup Poll

Can't Soften 'Us,' British Say

By Dr. George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 29.—Despite the pounding which Adolf Hitler's air force has delivered to British cities in recent months, the average Britisher still thinks Hitler's aerial bombardments alone will never succeed in breaking English resistance.

In London, in the Midland cities and in other parts of the embattled islands the men and women who have been served an almost daily ration of German bombs take the attitude: "The bombs are no joke, but he's got to show us a lot more than we've seen yet if he wants to win."

The "he" invariably refers to Adolf Hitler.

To see how British confidence was standing up under the German blitzkrieg the British Institute of Public Opinion has asked civilians in all parts of the country:

"From what you have experienced or read or heard about during the past few weeks, do you think it is possible or impossible for Germany to win the war by air attack alone on this country?"

The replies were:

Possible	6%
Not Possible	80
Undecided or No Opinion	14

The British Institute, an affiliate of the American Institute of Public Opinion, uses some 200 interviewers—mostly women and men over military age. Interviewers are equipped with identification papers, and many of them have been obliged to add a tin hat to their everyday outfits to lessen the danger from shrapnel splinters during their work.

Interviews take place in homes, in offices, and occasionally on streets and in air raid shelters.

Recently the British Institute asked:

"Do you think the government has been wise or unwise in favoring the building of surface shelters rather than underground shelters?"

Sixty-six per cent of those interviewed thought the government had been ill-advised in concentrating on surface shelters, 15 per cent did not object to such shelters and the remaining 19 per cent said they had no definite opinions.

'Duce Masses New Troops in Albania

Express Purpose Said To Be 'Liquidation Of Greek Incident'

By the Associated Press

Rome, Nov. 29.—Premier Mussolini followed a shakeup of his high command with a massing of new troops in Albania tonight for counter attacks.

With the appointment of Gen. Alfredo Guzzoni as undersecretary of war, Il Duce further centered here the direction of a campaign which the Rome radio said had the express mission of "liquidating the Greek incident."

Guzzoni, former commander in Africa and in Albania, is expected to be a liaison man between the high command and Gen. Ubaldo Soddu, commander in Albania.

"Without German Aid"

The Rome radio, which said the Greek advance in Albania has "fizzled out," declared the new forces in Albania had been given their task of turning back the Greeks "without German aid."

The broadcast acknowledged only "local successes" for the Greeks.

Gen. Carlo Geloeo's Eleventh Army in southern Albania was said to have repulsed Greek attempts to filter through the lines.

The Koritza sector defended by the Ninth Army under Gen. Mario Vercellino was reported "quiet." (The Italians have lost both Koritza and Pogradetz, 20 miles to the north.)

Naval Successes Claimed

Further naval successes were claimed in the wake of Wednesday's clash with the British fleet off Sardinia.

Italians said dive bombers yesterday attacked a British force steaming into Malta from the Sardinia fracas and struck a warship with a heavy bomb. Malta itself also was bombed and three British planes were reported shot down.

The Rome radio said one man was killed and seven wounded when a British shell struck the destroyer Lanciere in the previous day's battle.

The sinking of a 10,000-ton British transport in the Atlantic by a submarine, air attacks on military bases in Corfu, and the repulse of a new British air attack on the naval base of Taranto, were claimed in a high command communique.

Enrollment Off For Defense Classes Here

Employment Gain In D. C. Indicated by Training Course Lag

That employment conditions in Washington have improved since the launching of national preparedness plans was indicated yesterday by officials of the District's national defense training program, who said that for the first time since the program started enrollment in classes has fallen below the capacity of the shops.

There are now 150 enrollees in the white full-time classes which have a capacity of 260, it was announced. Enrollees from the WPA were expected to increase the number by 50 today. Welding is the only trade class which now has a waiting list of enrollees to be trained, William D. Wallace, supervisor of the white division, said.

The District Employment Center, which may refer up to 50 per cent of the enrollees to the various shop classes, has actually referred less than 10 per cent of its quota since October 14, it was pointed out.

Wallace stated that approximately 65 per cent of the trainees placed have been located in private industry, while about 35 per cent have entered Government service. He said that more white than colored trainees have been placed.

Trade training is being offered in blueprint reading and drafting, arc welding, oxy-acetylene welding, auto mechanics, cabinet and millwork, sheet metal, motor and radio electrical, machine shop and pattern making. Persons desiring to enter the classes must be registered with either the WPA or the District Employment Center.

Canadian Envoy Seriously Ill

New York, Nov. 29 (INS).—Loring Cheney Christie, Canadian Minister to the United States, was under observation tonight in the Rockefeller Institute Hospital. Friends said that Christie, who married the former Marion Trumbull, social secretary of the Canadian Legation, five days ago, suffered a heart attack.

At the Canadian Legation in Washington Christie's condition was understood to be serious. A spokesman there said the minister was under an oxygen tent last night.

Achilles Takes Over After Cudahy Resigns

The State Department said yesterday that the resignation of John Cudahy as Ambassador to Belgium would not leave the United States without representation to the Belgian government.

It pointed out that Theodore C. Achilles, Third Secretary of the American Embassy in London, some time ago was appointed, and is continuing to act as charge d'affaires ad interim near the Belgian government which is in that city.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts of the District Court yesterday sentenced Christ George Poulos, 46, to 4 to 12 years in prison for the seduction of a 12-year-old girl here a year ago.

The sentence also covers Poulos' imprisonment for fleeing Washington to evade trial, to which he pleaded guilty yesterday.

U. S., Greece Negotiating Warplane Deal

Agree on Principle Of Aid to Athens; British Take Part

Joint British-American efforts to aid the embattled Greeks are proceeding with attention centered on supplying aircraft to Greece, officials said yesterday.

Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles stated that an agreement in principle had been reached between the Greek government and the United States.

Philip Young, member of the Foreign Purchases Coordinating Committee, elaborated on this to explain that the Greeks are chiefly in search of aircraft and that, in order for them to get any, either Britain or the United States must release some of their orders to Greece.

Aircraft plants, he said, are booked up through April, 1942.

Decision on release of any of Britain's aircraft priorities here must come from London, British officials said yesterday.

Whether the United States Army will release any of its orders to the Greeks is now under discussion in official circles.

Meanwhile, the American effort to bolster opponents of totalitarianism saw these other developments:

Canada has arranged to acquire 144 American-made combat planes originally ordered by the Swedish government. Sweden had ordered the planes from the Vultee Aircraft Corporation, but the United States subsequently refused to grant an export license, presumably on grounds that the planes might fall into German hands.

At San Diego, Calif., the first of a fleet of 28 Consolidated patrol bomber type seaplanes took off for an unannounced destination, en route to join in defense of Great Britain. The Canadian government will take delivery on the East Coast.

New Warship Deal Talked

President Roosevelt reiterated at a press conference that he believed the Government's goal of "freezing" commercial aircraft production at present levels could be reached without enforcing priorities for defense orders.

In quarters discussing the possibility of transferring additional American warships to Britain in a trade, it was mentioned that the United States might receive in return the right to build a highway to Alaska on a "corridor" across Canada. No officials would confirm that such a deal, involving either warships or the highway, was in prospect.

The Treasury reported that the British government spent $315,749,000 of its American capital assets to buy war supplies here during the first year of the war, and at the end still had at least $385,719,000 of cash on deposit in American banks, in addition to gold stored here, and other resources.

Nazis Test London's Defenses In Heaviest Raid in 10 Nights

Attack Seeks to Determine if British Have Weakened Capital Forces to Protect Provincial Cities; Wide Damage Done

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), Nov. 30.—German warlanes, apparently attempting to determine whether the capital's defenses had been sapped to aid bombed provincial cities, again picked scarred London for their main target last night and early today.

Casualties and wrecked homes and buildings were reported from a wide area of the capital as explosive and fire bombs rained down from early last night until just before the all-clear signal at 2 a. m.

It was London's heaviest attack after ten nights of comparative calm in which provincial cities such as Bristol, Liverpool and Birmingham bore the brunt of Nazi bombs. Heavy attacks on those cities brought appeals to London for strenghtened defenses—a maneuver which some believed the part of Nazi strategy to weaken London.

Antiaircraft fire was heavy over the city, on the bombed outskirts, and down to the mouth of the Thames River. In one London district the raiders roared over at the rate of one every 30 seconds.

Dig for Victims

Relief workers immediately began digging for victims in wrecked homes. Firemen fought incendiary flames, and in one suburban area where a shopping center was struck soldiers aided in salvaging stocks.

Workers digging for victims in Liverpool homes demolished in Thursday night's raid were interrupted by further attacks. Additional casualties were reported early today from that big port city.

Six bombs demolished a housing development in a southeast coas al town, killing a mother and her two children.

In another south coast city one of many incendiary bombs crashed into a movie, but was extinguished by air raid wardens. The startled audience remained seated.

There were six known dead and others injured in one of the counties ringing London, and the raiders also bombed a town in Wales and two cities in the southwest.

Strange Lights in Sky

Bombs from a lone raider over an East Anglia town killed one man and injured three.

Here in London, strange blue-white beams stabbed the sky, paralleling the ground and with no visible connection with it, suggesting the employment of what the Daily Mail described only yesterday as a new "mystery weapon" for defense.

Rooftop machine gunners fired intermittently at parachute flares which fell in brilliant pairs and gave to the skyline the appearance of a sinister midway.

Many of the Nazi incendiaries were put out almost at the instant they fell, but fires sprang up nevertheless among rows of houses.

In the day London had three raid alarms and in daylight activity, the air ministry announced, five Axis planes were shot down against the loss of two British fighter planes.

Senators Demand Limit on Terms Of President

By the Associated Press

A fresh demand for limitation on Presidential terms bobbed up in Senate circles yesterday despite the tradition-shattering reelection of President Roosevelt to a third term.

Senator Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, who supported President Roosevelt in the recent election, said the question of Presidential terms had not been settled but should be submitted to the people as a clean-cut issue, free from personalities.

Senator Wiley (Republican), Wisconsin, said he would offer such a proposal in the next Congress coupled with the novel idea of giving retiring Presidents "life term places in the Senate as Senator-at-large with all powers of a Senator."

Another Democrat, Senator Adams (Democrat), Colorado, said this Nation had "reached the point where we should fix a definite maximum term on the Presidency. I don't know whether it should be a single term, two terms, or three terms, but we should get rid of the controversy."

Hecht Co. to Give Employes $12,000 Christmas Bonus

A Christmas bonus of approximately $12,000 will be distributed among more than 1,500 employes of the Hecht Co. December 14, it was announced yesterday by Charles B. Dulcan, sr., vice president and general manager of the firm.

The bonus will be divided among five groups of workers with division based on each employe's length of service, Dulcan said. Every employe of the organizatoin with six months' service will share in the award. Employes who have been with the store from one to ten years and over will receive additional bonuses based on their years of service. Every employe of the store will receive a share with the exception of executives, Dulcan said.

Special bonuses, based on meritorious service, will be paid "hundreds of extra sales people who have been called to assist during the Holiday season," Dulcan stated.

'Nonsense,' Says Kennedy Of Anti-British Charges

By the United Press

New York, Nov. 29.—Joseph P. Kennedy, U. S. Ambassador to Britain, tonight described as "nonsense" reports that "I do not expect Britain to win the war" and reiterated his stand against American entry into the conflict.

"What I am concerned with is keeping America out of the war," the Ambassador said in reply to a request for a re-statement of his position. "Everyone has known from the beginning that I have been against American entry into the war."

The Ambassador's statement follows:

"I am told that there is some gossip in London to the effect that I am making anti-British statements in this country and that I am even saying that I do not expect the British to win the war.

"This is nonsense.

"I have never made anti-British statements or said—on or off the record—that I do not expect Britain to win the war. I have never made in this country any statement which I did not make to four or five of the members of the British cabinet before I left London.

"I am constantly asking the question, 'Do you think England is going to win or lose the war?' But how can anyone know that unless he knows what is the strength of Germany? I don't know what is the strength of Germany.

Nazis Boast Naval Victory In Channel

Two Destroyers Torpedoed, They Say; Factories Bombed

By International News Service

Berlin, Nov. 29.—The sinking of two British destroyers and four merchant vessels and the transformation of the huge English port of Liverpool into a blazing shambles were claimed tonight by authoritative German circles.

Following is the account of what the Nazi officials cited as a partial score for the last 24 hours:

The British destroyers were torpedoed by a squadron of Nazi destroyers which drove through the English Channel today as far as the western end of it.

One destroyer, identified as a vessel of 1,900 tons and of the very latest type, sank immediately. The second, struck amidships, was sinking when the German destroyers left the scene. None of the Nazi warships was hit.

This was in addition to a heavy aerial raid on London factories and supply depots along the Thames River during the day in which great damage was done. One British hurricane fighter plane was shot down.

The four British merchant ships were sunk off England's south coast. But there was no indication whether they were attacked by the same destroyers that defeated the British warships.

One was a vessel of 9,000 tons, another of 3,000 tons, while both others were smaller.

The aerial raid on Liverpool was one of a series Thursday night and this morning in which London also was battered severely. The huge Victoria docks in the British Capital were left in flames.

Attack Drydocks

Drydocks vital to British shipbuilding, oil tanks and huge grain elevators in Birkenhead, across the Mersey, were attacked in the Liverpool raid.

While the Luftwaffe was bombing London and Liverpool, British bombers attacked cities and villages in northern and western Germany, it was announced.

Three of the Royal Air Force bombers were shot down, the Germans said.

D. C. Auto Deaths Drop 23% in Bid For U. S. Honors

Washington is making a determined bid for national safety honors in 1940 with a 23 per cent decrease in highway fatalities over the last ten months, the National Safety Council reported yesterday.

Traffic deaths in the District now total 65 as against 76 for the same period last year.

But across the country, the picture is not so encouraging, the Safety Council announced. With dangerous holiday months still ahead, there is already a 6 per cent increase in motoring deaths throughout the Nation, the report said.

The council predicted the end of 1940 would see a national traffic toll exceeding by possibly 2,000 the 1939 record.

Second Airport Fire Destroys Two Storage Sheds

The second fire within 12 hours destroyed two storage sheds and endangered temporary structures at the National Airport terminal building at Gravelly Point at 1:40 a. m. yesterday.

The sheds and a large quantity of equipment were destroyed before three Arlington County fire companies could extinguish the flames with water lines stretched 1,850 feet from a hydrant at the Bureau of Public Roads testing laboratories.

Donaldson estimated the loss at $3,000 and said the fire apparently was started by an overheated stove in one of the sheds.

A short circuit was blamed by Donaldson for a fire that destroyed a portable machine shop at the airport Thursday with estimated loss of $750.

More than 100 officials of Lansburgh & Bros. Department Store will attend the firm's annual dinner dance at the Woodmont Country Club tonight.

Hosts for the affair are Sol Lansburgh, president of the store; Mark Lansburgh, vice president; Milton P. Schlesinger, treasurer; R. B. H. Lyon, Samuel Schwartz and A. Cohen, directors, and Ralph Goldsmith, general manager.

R.A.F. Pounds U-Boat Base, Baltic Port

Bremen Radio Shuts Off as British Raid Industrial Centers

By International News Service

London, Nov. 29.—The Bremen radio station went silent tonight, indicating Royal Air Force bombers were aiming new blows at Germany's industrial heart as a sequel to heavy raids last night that blasted a German submarine engine factory and numerous other targets.

Tonight's R. A. F. expeditions were launched while Britons were still reading about the most recent British night attacks that struck with special force at the great Reich centers of Dusseldorf and Mannheim and the huge synthetic oil plants at Politz, where 20 big fires were said to have been started.

One squadron of long-distance R. A. F. bombers reached far out to attack a German Baltic seaport, while other formations simultaneously hammered the Nazi-occupied "invasion ports" of Antwerp, Boulogne and Le Havre.

U-Boat Plant Bombed

Objectives of the British raiders included gasworks, communications, armament factories, auto plants, naval shipbuilding yards, docks, military warehouses and several Nazi airdromes. According to returning pilots, fires and explosions followed a concentrated bombing of the huge submarine engine works at Mannheim in what appeared to be an effort to cripple Germany's U-boat fleet at its source.

The raid on the synthetic oil plants at Politz shaped up as one of the most destructive attacks the British have yet directed at that industry so indispensable to Germany's Luftwaffe and mechanized ground forces. The scores of large fires among these works took on the appearance of a gigantic cauldron, participating airmen reported. It was related that the "flames were enlivened by lesser explosions which spread debris throughout the traget area."

The naval shipbuilding yards at the Baltic port of Stettin also suffered blazing ruin under tons of explosive and incendiary steel. One "heavy explosion," pilots recounted, "ripped buildings and supply stores to pieces" and later a great blaze was observed roaring up from the center of the shipbuilding yards.

Rhineland Attacked

Exceptionally large formations of R. A. F. "destroyers" were understood to have been employed in the attacks over the Rhineland industrial and communications centers of Dusseldorf and Mannheim. There, direct hits were declared to have been registered on freight yards, naval armaments plants, automobile factories and airports.

The docks at Cuxhaven, German North Sea port; railway lines and junctions in western Germany, military supply dumps near Mainz and the Cologne and Eindhoven airdromes also were lambasted by the R. A. F. bombers, two of which were lost during the night.

'Nickel-a-Week Protection Racket Revealed in School

Costly "protection" for small boys at Terrell Junior High School ceased yesterday with arrest of eight colored boys, 12 to 16, who were charged with "protecting" the youngsters for 5 cents a week.

Policeman William L. Green, who made the arrests, said the boys in custody forced smaller boys at the school to pay them to prevent a weekly beating. His attention was called to the youthful racketeers by the principal of the school, where he serves as schoolboy patrol coordinator.

Green said he learned the protection racket is practiced at other colored schools. The eight boys, who call themselves the "Purple Cross Gang," will be arraigned in Juvenile Court, where complaints have been filed.

Woman Sentenced, To Get Probation

Mrs. Rosalyn Randle was sentenced to two to six years in prison for using the mails to defraud, by Justice James W. Morris in the District Court yesterday.

Justice Morris directed that Mrs. Randle be released on probation when she completes a three-to-eight-month jail term she is now serving for obtaining $500 for a bogus brain cure here.

Mrs. Randle recently pleaded guilty to the mail fraud charge, based on letters in which she asserted that her diet method would cure cancer and other diseases.

Gossip Facilities Suggested To Keep Cockneys in Country

England's Health Minister Offers Steps To Counteract 'Back-to-London Complex;' Finds City Evacuees Dislike Trees, Flowers

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 29.—Facilities for swapping gossip were included in a program outlined by Health Minister Malcolm MacDonald today to counteract a "must-get-back-to-London" complex which afflicts many removed families in spite of the city's nightly air raids.

"They don't like trees, grass and flowers," he commented. "They want smoking chimneys and signboards. When they read about new canteens and entertainments being provided in the public shelters in London, they grow bored with their surroundings in some country rectory and back they come."

His plans for countering this homesickness include communal feeding centers to decrease the friction between country housewives and evacuee mothers in overcrowded kitchens, sick bays, hostels for difficult children, nursery centers and mothers' clubs "where they can do their washing and sewing and enjoy good old Cockney gossip."

MacDonald said 1,500,000 persons had been moved from London and other big cities to the "reception areas" of the countryside, even though an army of nearly 2,000,000 men had to be billeted in the same regions.

About 370,000 of London's school children have been removed and only 80,000 remain in the city, but 30,000 of the 220,000 children under 5 are still enduring the nightly air raids.

Old folks have proved more difficult than the children. Inspectors touring public shelters induced 4,500 to leave for hostels in the country, but 3,500 Cockney "grannies" will not go.

Vandenberg Blocks Action on Madden

President Roosevelt's nomination of Admiral William D. Leahy to be Ambassador to France won speedy Senate approval yesterday, but Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, blocked similar action on a judicial appointment for J. Warren Madden, former chairman of the Labor Board.

Madden's nomination came up under procedure requiring unanimous consent for it to be considered, and Vandenberg refused to agree. He declined to announce what he would do Monday when the appointment will again come before the Senate.

The Senate confirmed the appointment of John Campbell White as Minister to Haiti. White now is a consul general in Morocco.

motion.

Bondy said that most of Washington's migrants come from Maryland, Virginia, the Carolinas and New York, but that all parts of the country contribute.

The House Committee Investigating the Interstate Migration of Destitute Citizens devoted the day to hearing officials of the District government and social welfare organizations, migrants, and a spokesman for Maryland. A paper was submitted for Virginia.

A National Problem

Chairman Tolan (Democrat), of California, said he is convinced that the problem of caring for migrant workers is national in scope.

During the afternoon the committee questioned a panel of social welfare organization officials comprising Mrs. John J. O'Connor, chairman of the transient committee of the Council of Social Agencies; Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, chairman of the family welfare division of the Council of Social Agencies; Miss Alice Elizabeth Jones, executive secretary of the Washington Travelers Aid Society; Maj. Charles H. Dodd, divisional commander of the Salvation Army, and Charles Houston, associate counsel of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

These welfare workers agreed that the lack of employment and sometimes medical treatment were the principal causes of migration of families.

Philip E. Ryan, chairman of the migration committee of the National Conference on Social Work, proposed a permanent national commission to study the migration problem and devise both a short-term and long-range program of relief.

Could any Christmas Gifts be more treasured than these?

A book that sheds light on history's greatest men, events and ideas

LETTERS MAKE the most interesting reading in the world, especially other people's. And here, in this one superb volume, are assembled some of the most interesting letters of all time—the crucial and characteristic private communications of the foremost people of world history—ranging from Alexander the Great and St. Paul to George Bernard Shaw and Thomas Mann. Here Heloise and Abelard pour out their love in learned and passionate letters —Leonardo da Vinci asks for a job and tells his reasons why he should be hired—Darwin tells his old friend of his decision to publish "a little essay on the origin of mankind."

There are 608 pages of them—some of the most historic letters ever written —the winnowed best of twenty centuries; edited and integrated to shed light —as only private and secret letters can—on the great men, events, and ideas of history.

That is why this is an unparalleled Christmas gift, one that no home library should be without.

A TREASURY OF THE WORLD'S GREAT LETTERS

From Ancient Days to Our Own Time, Edited by M. Lincoln Schuster

A glorious record of genius that is an art gallery in itself

NEVER BEFORE in the history of book publishing has there been a volume like this. It includes 144 of the world's greatest paintings reproduced in full color direct from the original masterpieces themselves. It contains, as well, 70,000 words of brilliant interpretative text by Thomas Craven.

This book was a best-seller last year and is again this year—because it is a glorious record of genius that is an art gallery in itself. Most of the original masterpieces represented in it are now underground in bomb-proof shelters—but to own this book is to have their beauty on permanent view in one's own home. Art critics, great painters, reviewers—people from all walks of life—are unanimous in their judgment that A Treasury of Art Masterpieces is a miraculous book—a fabulous book—one of the most beautiful books of all time.

St. Matthew's Cathedral to Celebrate Its 100th Anniversary as Parish on Dec. 8

Archbishop Curley May Participate In Centennial

St. Matthew's Cathedral, domed landmark in Rhode Island Avenue near Connecticut Avenue, on December 8 will celebrate its 100th anniversary as a church parish with services of solemn high mass.

Mgr. Buckey

If his health permits, the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, will either preside or celebrate the mass, which many clerical and lay leaders of the two archdioceses are expected to attend.

There is a possibilty that the Right Rev. Msgr. Edward L. Buckey, rector at St. Matthew's since his ordination in 1901, may pontificate at the mass. Powers invested in him when made honorary prothonotary last June by Pope Pius XII gives him the privilege of pontificating the same as a bishop, at the direction of the archbishop.

A reception in the evening at the Mayflower Hotel for the visiting clergy and the congregation and other friends will climax the celebration for the parish of St. Matthew's, which on October 12, 1939, was designated as the Cathedral for the newly-created Washington Archdiocese.

The Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, Bishop of Bilta, and Catholic University rector, will be among the distinguished guests at the mass, at which the Very Rev. Ignatius Smith, O. P., dean of the school of philosophy at Catholic University, will preach.

The original location of St. Matthew's was on the site of the Southern Building at Fifteenth and H Streets Northwest. While the present building's cornerstone was laid in 1893, Msgr. Buckey celebrated mass at the old church for some time and lived at its rectory.

Msgr. Thomas Sim Lee began the Rhode Island Avenue edifice in 1893, dedicating it to St. Matthew in honor of Father Williams Matthews, once pastor of St. Patrick's, "mother" parish of St. Matthew's.

Among the striking features of St. Matthew's is the delicate marble carving in the gates to the white chancel rail, made of Indian marble and copied from the screen at the Taj Mahal; the Carroll Chapel, given by the family of Charles Carroll of Carrollton, cousin of the first Bishop of Baltimore and Msgr. Lee's ancestor, and the new chapel of St. Francis Assisi, decorated by Thomas La Farge, grand-nephew of Grant La Farge, original designer of the church. Walls of the Our Lady of the Blessed Virgin Chapel have recently felt the touch of La Farge's brush in a series of murals depicting the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin.

A native of Georgetown and son of Georgetown natives, Msgr. Buckey was educated at Columbian "Prep" and Columbian College, subsequently being graduated from the General Theological Seminary in New York. He helped build a church in Newport, R. I. In 1898, he became a convert to Catholicism.

Affiliated with the parish are the Rev. William Stricker, the Rev. John Argut, the Rev. Wilbur Wheeler and the Rev. Gerald Cole and Sisters of the Order of the Holy Cross. The Calvert School of the parish now occupies the former residence of Chief Justice White in Rhode Island Avenue.

Miss Helen Philibert, member of the parish and Navy Department employee, is now compiling a history of the church, third oldest of its faith in Washington.

"ALL HAIL THE POWER OF JESUS NAME"
EDWARD PERRONET

All hail the power of Jesus' name,
Let angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem,
And crown Him Lord of all.
Bring forth the royal diadem,
And crown Him Lord of all.
This inspiring lyric of praise was written about the middle of the 18th century. Reverend Edward Perronet was a man of great faith and humility, and so zealous in his convictions that he sacrificed royal patronage and became the happy pastor of a small church. His last words at his death were this Gloria.

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Nov. 29 (U.P.). Italian forces were in danger of being trapped tonight between the Mokra Mountains and the Yugoslav frontier as Greek troops attempted to cut off the Fascist retreat toward Elbasan, according to reports from the frontier reaching here.

Eleven Italian transports arrived at the Albanian port of Durazzo at 3 a. m. today and disembarked reinforcements which immediately hurried inland, the reports said.

Durrazzo is 38 miles northwest of Elbasani, where Fascist forces are reported preparing a defense line to halt the Greek advance and from which possibly to launch a counter-offensive.

Navy's Plans for 'Penthouse' Out of Ship Funds Hit Snag

Plans for expanding the Navy's office space in Washington have hit a financial snag in a ruling of Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren, it was learned yesterday.

Warren ruled, in effect, that the Navy could not use its shipbuilding funds for construction of an office "penthouse" atop a new wing of its building. Navy officials, it was learned, are seeking the $100,000 estimated as necessary for the penthouse.

In telling Warren about their office needs, Navy officials recited that they had been given $590,000 under an appropriation approved October 9, for construction of an additional wing on the Navy Department building, and an extra story on the present wing No. 1. This amount, they made clear was not enough to cover the extra story on the new wing.

First Plan Dropped

When they asked for these funds, their report said, they expected the War Department to turn over to the Navy three wings of the Munitions Building. This plan, however, was dropped, making it more imperative, their report said, "that action be taken to obtain additional space to relieve the present crowded conditions of the Navy Department Building."

The Navy's solution, it was explained, would have been to put a penthouse on the new wing, taking whatever extra funds were needed, around $100,000, out of a $150,000,000 appropriation for shipbuilding. The appropriation included authority to acquire land and erect buildings. The Navy explained that the new office space in Washington was to be used by the Bureau of Ships, charged with the shipbuilding program.

Warren Spikes Plan

Warren said, however, that if the Navy could do this "it would follow that such appropriation might legally be used for the construction of an entire new wing, or series of wings, or an entire new building, or series of new buildings, for departmental activities in Washington, without further consideration or authorization by Congress.

"I can find no authority of law for the proposed action," Warren declared.

He added that since Congress limited the cost of the building additions to $590,000, any increase for the unauthorized penthouse "is necessarily a matter for the consideration of the Congress."

President Confers With Fiscal Aides

either on an increase in the national debt limit.

"All I can say is that we are going to make ample provision either by an increase in the national debt or by increasing taxes, to see that the Government's debts are paid," the Senate Finance Committee chairman said.

In ruling out the possibility of retroactive additional taxes on 1940 income, Harrison pointed out that the two bills already enacted this session had retroactive provisions reaching back to January 1, 1940.

Cooper told reporters that "probable expenditures and probable revenues" were discussed by the conferees but declined to disclose estimates other than to say that "it was a gratifying physical picture."

He indicated this year's expenditures to date for nonmilitary items and revenues for the same period are approximately in balance.

Amortization Discussed

One of the goals proposed for further tax had been to bring revenues into line with "normal" expenditures. It was hinted on the basis of figures presented last night that this objective may be possible without any sharp upward tax revisions.

Possible provision in any new tax bill for amortization of the huge defense costs was also discussed, but conferees said no decisions were reached. Harrison said further revision of the excess profits tax structure to provide more income was not mentioned. Nor was there any conclusion on how much money another tax program, if there is another, might need to raise.

Barred in advance was any resort to a Federal sales tax as the group opened annual tax talks over the White House dinner table.

At a press conference preceding the tax round table, President Roosevelt told reporters that no decisions would be reached, that both taxes and expenditures would be examined but the study would be merely exploratory.

Sales Tax Not Favored

The President indicated sales taxes were out in answer to a press conference query. He said he had not heard any talk that a sales tax might be considered. Asked if he would look with favor on such a proposal, he said he would not.

Increased taxes, coupled with economies in nonmilitary spending enabling the Treasury to bring the nondefense budget into balance, had shaped up as a policy objective before last night's conference.

Doughton urged this course following talks with the President last week.

Economy Note

The President himself injected the economy note early this week, when he said nonmilitary public works estimates would be cut to the bone.

Roughly, Administration tax experts were hoping to build a tax structure that would yield about $10,000,000,000 against the existing one yielding nearby $7,000,000,000 on the present volume of business. Part of the increase would come from expanding yields from present taxes as business increases. This would not "pay as you go" either the current year's total $13,500,000,000 spending level, or the larger costs expected next year, but it would curtail the rising defense deficits.

Navy to Speed Ship Program

set for completion of the ships was too far off.

At the same time, the Navy, accelerating the shipbuilding program, arranged for reopening of the long-idle Cramp Shipbuilding Co. yards at Philadelphia and awarded contracts for construction there of six cruisers at an estimated cost of $113,822,280. The department also awarded contracts for expansion of plant facilities of the company at an estimated cost of $9,500,000.

In addition, Secretary of the Navy Knox announced that a new $5,000,000 gun-equipment plant—employing 1,000 skilled workers and covering 135 acres—will be located on the Ohio River, near Louisville, Ky.

President Roosevelt emphasized that his move to hasten destroyer construction had nothing to do with reported British requests for more American craft of that type to augment the 50 previously traded to the British navy.

Naval experts have pointed out that the present destroyer strength of the Navy is considerably below what it should be as a screening force for the number of battleships and cruisers now in operation.

Force Is Low Now

At the time contracts were awarded for the 115 destroyers, as part of an aggregate order for 201 new fighting ships for a "two-ocean Navy," it was said that the bulk of the program would not be completed before the latter part of 1944.

The destroyer construction period varies widely, Navy officials said, depending on plant conditions, the number of ships in an order, and other factors. In some few instances the period is now down to around 12 months, but schedules under the 115-ship program originally ranged from almost two years to about four years. It is this latter time stretch that the Administration seeks now to reduce.

Of the 159 destroyers now in commission, 75 already are "overage."

Almazanist Riot Ignored By Wallace

Thousands Cheer Diplomats After Reception Ceremony

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, Nov. 29.—Henry A. Wallace, United States Vice President-elect, presented his credentials as special ambassador today and with other envoys heard retiring President Lazaro Cardenas say every American country would "see to its own defense, ready if need be to go to the defense of all."

Wallace, visiting Mexico as a special envoy to the presidential inauguration of Manuel Avila Camacho, took no notice of last night's demonstration before the United States Embassy, put on by disgruntled followers of Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, who was defeated by Avila Camacho.

"I don't know anything about it," Wallace said of the demonstration, which was timed to coincide with his arrival.

"Collective action of American nations (in the defense program)," Cardenas said, "does not imply menace for anyone but is taken merely for protection of all."

He said the continental nations wished to "participate in the program in common interest without giving up any part of their sovereignty."

The ceremonies were held in the great reception room of the presidential palace, and thousands outside cheered the diplomats as they left.

Almazan himself disavowed last night's demonstration, when sticks and rocks were flung at the embassy and Wallace's car. He said:

"I especially requested my friends to abstain from acts of violence in a statement issued on my arrival. True friends have respected my desire."

His followers expressed resentment against Wallace because the United States recognized Avila Camacho as President-elect.

Japan Recognizes Wang Regime

nese as a regional refugee regime.

Japanese reports from Nanking claimed that signing of the treaty by Wang and Japan's Ambassador, Gen. Nobuyuki Abe, "restored to normalcy the relations between the two powers which was disrupted July 7, 1937, when the first shot rang out on Marco Polo Bridge near Peiping to signal the undeclared war between Japan and China."

But Chungking officials said Chinese military resistance under Chiang would be increased following the so-called peace treaty.

Fighting Continues

Evidence of this resistance, aside from the dynamiting of the train, which blasted five coaches from the tracks at Soochow about 50 miles west of here, was contained in Japanese military reports of fighting between Japanese troops and Chiang's forces in central China.

Japanese reports of the Nanking treaty said it was based on a statement December 22, 1938, by Japanese Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye when he said Japan was prepared to respect China's integrity, desired no territory, and would help her abolish foreign concessions and extraterritoriality practices.

The treaty was said to call for Chinese payment of reparations to Japan for all war damages to Japanese property, the right for Japanese troops to remain in China for two years after the restoration of peace, for Chinese control of internal Chinese taxation and for the return to Chinese owners of factories and other properties now held by the Japanese.

Manchoukuo, also a Japanese-created state, recognized the Nanking regime immediately after the Tokyo representative signed the treaty. Then representatives of the three regimes "solemnly pledged cooperation in the creation of a new order in East Asia," Japanese reports said.

Idzumo Fires Salute

As Gen. Abe and Wang signed their names the Japanese flagship of the China Sea fleet, the Idzumo, anchored in the Yangtze River, fired a 21-gun salute. Ashore, two huge balloons were released. They bore pennants reading, "Chinese-Japanese Cooperation in the Reconstruction of East Asia."

Wang sent a "last exhortation" to Chiang asking him to declare an armistice with Japan, but the Chungking government's only answer was seen in the guerrilla attack on the Nanking-bound train which at first was believed carrying Japanese and Chinese officials to the ceremony.

STEWART McDONALD

McDonald to Work Without Pay; Will Return to Business

Stewart McDonald, Federal Housing Administrator, resigned yesterday, but at the same time accepted a payless position as Deputy Federal Loan Administrator to watch over the housing agency.

McDonald said he would give virtually all of his time to his work as chairman of the Maryland Casualty Co., in which the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has a large investment. With offices in Baltimore, however, he said he would return here at least twice a week to supervise the FHA from his new position under Loan Administrator Jesse Jones.

McDonald was praised by the President for his services as head of the FHA.

Mr. Roosevelt nominated as his successor Abner H. Ferguson, of Loudon County, Md., who has been general counsel and first assistant administrator of FHA. Ferguson now gets $12,500 a year, but will be cut to $10,000 on becoming administrator.

While the duty assignments of the trainees who will be cleared from Meade today and tomorrow were not divulged, it was thought likely some of the Washington men would go to Fort Belvoir, Va.

One of the two engineering replacement centers in the country, Belvoir's engineer detachments are expected to expand to 20,000 officers and men by spring. The Third Corps Area schedule calls for 67 selectives to move to the riverside encampment today. Unofficial Army policy calls for the stationing of selectives in camps near their homes as far as feasible.

After the ten replacements are sent to Meade later this week, no men will be called up until 1941. This became increasingly certain as War Department mobilization experts decided against calling any men in the Christmas period.

The Army prefers not to take men from their family groups during the holiday period, it was reported, and, in any case, many receiving companies would be depleted by Christmas furloughs and unable to serve as training units.

The Postoffice Department yesterday requested relatives of inducted men to hold up letters, food, and other gifts being sent new men until they have been cleared from reception centers to their permanent posts. A great bulk of mail will miscarry because of the shifting of personnel, it is expected.

Those inducted into the Army yesterday: John R. Dudley, of Middleburg, Va.; John F. Booth, Draydon, Md.; John Bean, Calloway's, Md.; Joseph Simms, Bealton, Md.; Samuel Zigler, of Monravia, Md.; Claiborne H. Phillips, Burgess Store, Va.; Raymond C. Hance, Laurel, Md.; Karl Korn, Prince Georges County, Md.; Walter Stewart, of Mitchellsville, Md.; Thomas Simmons, of La Plata, Md.; and William J. Brooks.

Help for Rejects Asked

Selective Service Director Clarence O. Dykstra yesterday called on State selection directors to "utilize every facility" to reinstate men who had quit jobs and otherwise terminated civilian connections only to be rejected by Army physical examiners.

Throughout the country, a large percentage of those passed by local board examiners and placed in Class 1-A have been rejected by Army doctors. Officials blame a discrepancy in standards of the classification and induction examinations.

Mexican Demonstration

The hostile demonstration at the American Embassy in Mexico City as Vice President-elect and Mrs. Wallace arrived is a sour but nonetheless thought-provoking commentary upon the efforts of the United States to cultivate the friendship of Mexico. President Roosevelt sent Mr. Wallace to attend Mexico's inauguration ceremonies, to be held on Sunday, for the special purpose of drawing the two countries into a closer understanding. But his appearance was the signal for a shower of stones hurled at the embassy and for shouts of "Down with the United States."

Responsibility for this unpleasant incident clearly falls upon Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan. In renouncing his claims to the Presidency of Mexico the other day, Gen. Almazan still maintained that he had been elected, and said that he had decided to give up the struggle when the United States recognized his rival, Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho. In short, he put the full responsibility for his elimination upon the United States. That grossly unfair statement naturally inflamed his followers to resentment against this country.

Actually, of course, the United States made a gesture of friendship toward the prospective Camacho regime because it appeared that the Mexican government and people had accepted President Cardenas' choice as their next President. There was no intention to intervene in Mexican affairs, but only a desire to promote solidarity between the two countries in the interests of hemispheric defense. Gen. Almazan has distorted this act of friendship and thus intensified latent distrust and suspicions of the United States merely to serve his own purposes.

Secretary Wallace's cool disregard for the noisy demonstration has helped to minimize its significance. No doubt the Mexican government, too, will make every effort to prevent further unpleasantries during the Vice President-elect's visit. Nevertheless, the angry shouts of the Almazanistas will help this country to remember the very delicate nature of our relations with our southern neighbor.

What Aid For Europe?

The question of feeding starving people in Europe is enveloped in confusion largely because it is being approached from so many different standpoints. Some who see only the humanitarian aspects of the problem are impatient to send food ships to Europe regardless of what the consequences may be. Others concerned only with the military problem of holding the Nazis in check refuse to consider any form of war relief in Europe on the ground that it would redound to the benefit of Hilter.

Obviously the sensible approach lies somewhere between these two extremes. Shipments from the United States that might increase the supply of food available to Germany and thus help that country win her fight against Great Britain are, of course, out of the question. The American public would never tolerate such reckless misapplication of the humanitarian impulse, and the British certainly would not relinquish their blockade for such a suicidal gesture. As a preliminary to any discussion of the subject, therefore, we must accept the proposition that no relief which would give aid and comfort to the aggressive Axis powers shall be sent.

It does not necessarily follow that all hope of easing the horrors of starvation in shattered European countries must be abandoned. At the White House conference on Thursday, for example, Chairman Davis of the Red Cross is reported to have discussed with the President the possibility of supplying milk and concentrated vitamins to hungry children in unoccupied France and possibly Spain. The American Red Cross already has a reliable organization in both occupied and unoccupied France. Heretofore this agency has been used chiefly for the distribution of medical supplies, but it would be quite competent to distribute milk and essential vitamin foods through the schools, health centers and similar institutions. Milk could be shipped in powdered form to avert any possible use of American cans as scrap for Germany. As for Spain, this country is said to be even more desperately in need of milk for children than is France. In both instances timely aid of this sort from the United States could be expected to strengthen the morale of the people and thus make their cooperation with the Axis less likely.

It is difficult to see how the supply of milk in limited quantities to French and Spanish children through public institutions would have any effect whatsoever upon the outcome of the war. Relatively small shipments would be sent so that the supply could be cut off immediately if any abuse of the system should develop. Such a limited effort would not save the conquered peoples of Europe from hunger and suffering. But if it were successful, it might induce the British to permit more extensive aid under the same careful safeguards.

Guns And Butter

The current discussion of priorities in respect of airplanes is an example of the way in which our production problem is being handled in terms of industries instead of in terms of the Nation as a whole. Our airlines have been doing a boom business, and wish to order new planes for handling the rise in air traffic. Plans call for a 100 per cent increase in the number of transports by 1942. But Secretary Stimson comes along with an Army objection to expansion on the grounds that the airline orders might impede the output of war planes.

It is quite true that the airline plan would run head-on into defense requirements. But the solution, surely, isn't that we should dispense with airline expansion—that we should deny ourselves this butter because of the prior claim of guns. The correct solution springs to the eyes, as the French say, as soon as we look into the conditions surrounding our aircraft industry. In its present organization the aircraft industry cannot cope swiftly enough with the demands which are being put upon it. But is our productive capacity for building planes limited to the aircraft industry? Not at all. It is Nation-wide. Capacity for turning out planes exists elsewhere, as, for example, in the automobile industry. And the time has come to see what this giant of an industry can do in helping the aircraft industry to meet the demands with more dispatch.

It is understandable that the aircraft industry would object to any intrusion upon its field by the automobile industry. The same objection was heard in Britain before the May 10 blitzkrieg. But after May 10, as Messrs. Alsop and Kintner have shown, the British mobilized their entire productive capacity. Orders for planes were given to automobile as well as aircraft builders, and, as a result, not even the Nazi bombing could prevent a continuous rise in production.

In our country the capacity of the automobile industry is now being employed at only 60 per cent. That means there's 40 per cent to spare for defense purposes. If, for instance, the foundries of any one of our giant automobile builders were put on a three-shift basis, they could spare a couple of days a week for aircraft. To be sure, the making of planes is different from the making of automobiles. But, if the automobile makers can turn out 20,000 cars a day, they could turn out—or, as Charles F. Kettering puts it, publish—500 planes a day, granted a standard design.

Compare this figure with a rate of production of airplanes of less than a thousand a month. The figure is pathetically inadequate. President Roosevelt once talked of 50,000 planes for America, and the British had 6,000 planes on order before the new 12,000-plane order was mentioned. At the present rate of output, however, it will be years before the aircraft industry fills all the demands. Yet time is of the essence in our defense scheme, and requires the mobilization of all our resources, not the resources of just one industry.

The fact is we are expecting an infant to do a man's job. We are putting the burden of our greatest need upon one of our smallest and newest industries. Seen in this light, the new "bottleneck" which seems likely to put the commercial airlines on rations is purely imaginary. In the new language we don't need to do with less butter in order to get the guns. That is our great good fortune in this day of belt-tightening. We can have both guns and butter by utilizing the productive capacity of our Nation in filling out a defense program for our Nation. Otherwise, as the restrictions in prospect for the commercial airlines show, we shall have to be content with both less butter and inadequate defense.

The Food Inquiry

The Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice has announced that it has begun a Nation-wide investigation of the food industry. The object is to eliminate violations of the antitrust laws and thereby to reduce food prices to consumers and raise the incomes of farmers. It is alleged that processors and distributors are getting a much larger percentage of the consumer's food dollar than they did a quarter of a century ago. Evidently the Department of Justice expects to uncover various kinds of trade restraints within the distributive field.

The food investigation, like the housing inquiry launched over a year ago, is typical of the new enforcement methods of the Antitrust Division. Assistant Attorney General Arnold believes that effective enforcement of the antitrust laws requires a comprehensive Nation-wide examination of a selected industrial field. Only in that way is it possible to discover all the combinations and trade restraints that impede the free movement of goods in interstate commerce. Armed with this information the Department of Justice is then able to proceed simultaneously against all offenders. In Mr. Arnold's opinion it is not only ineffective but unfair to single out one or a few combinations within an industry for prosecution, as such discrimination merely gives an advantage to those who happen to escape.

An inquiry of this comprehensive nature in the food industry will benefit law-abiding distributors as well as consumers and farmers by bringing to light evidences of price fixing or collusive practices militating against healthy forms of competition. In the present emergency, particularly, it is extremely important to prevent profiteering in foodstuffs. For, if sharp increases in prices should occur without the justification of scarcity to explain the advance, demands for Government price controls would become insistent. Leaders of the food industry who have pledged themselves to cooperate with the Department of Justice, consequently, have been guided by enlightened self-interest. Those who have nothing discreditable to conceal should have nothing to fear from an inquiry which has for its aim the suppression of illegal trade practices.

Ursa Major

The career of Jesse L. Livermore, the man who could win or lose millions overnight merely by sitting at a desk and talking simultaneously into several dozen telephones, was a phenomenon so curious that a hundred years from now people may even doubt that such things could ever have happened. Or, if they believe, they must surely wonder how a man could consume a lifetime in what was, after all, a singularly profitless passion. Perhaps in the end he wondered about this himself. At any rate, in the farewell note that he scribbled before putting the bullet into his head he admitted that his life had been a failure.

And yet for nearly a quarter of a century he was the envy and admiration and, in the end, the despair of the bucket shops and the customers' rooms. He was the Boy Wonder of Wall Street, the Prince of Plungers whose success story was told and retold, in one guise or another, in Mr. Tousey's Fame and Fortune Weekly for the edification of just such farmers' lads and office boys as Jesse Livermore himself had been.

He was perhaps the smartest and slickest of the legendary Wall Street Bears. Even in his youth he knew by instinct or observation that sugar is usually sweetest and most plentiful on the short side of the markets.

It has often been contended that those short operators perform a salutary function by acting as a stabilizer. But this was scarcely the case in the middle 1920's. Large scale speculators of Jesse Livermore's acumen rarely go heavily short in runaway markets. Thus the greatest of all of Livermore's killings in shorts is said to have been made during and after that dies irae of 1929. If it were really true, as was asserted at the time, that his operations in shorts precipitated that great financial cataclysm, then his professional as well as his physical life could be said to have been self-destroyed. For he had helped to slay the high, wide and not altogether handsome epoch that had created and nourished himself and his kind. But, of course, that would be giving him credit for far too much power.

Planning in Virginia

Under the Virginia State Planning Board are being coordinated a central population study, a new Bureau of Industrial Research at the University of Virginia, and a land-use survey at Virginia Polytechnic Institute. These studies, conducted with the financial support of the Rockefeller General Education Board, have been integrated with the State government in an ingenious arrangement which is expected to bridge the usual gap between research and social action. The need for action in guiding Virginia's development of its resources has long been recognized. But practical long-term guidance in the development of Virginia's resources has been awaiting just such a service as the one now beginning.

Through this survey of "The People and Resources of Virginia" it should be possible to advise the location of new industries where gainful employment will most relieve economic distress—perhaps even steer part-time manufactures to sections where work of that type is most needed to eke out meager farming profits. Other enterprises could be helped in finding sites strategic with relation to raw materials and markets. The planning of roads, schools and health safeguards also should benefit immeasurably, and, in general, the study will help to restore that balance among people, industries and farms which has not existed since the early days when enterprises grew out of local needs and facilities.

Thanks, Bud!

Dies Committee

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is about time the Dies Committee stops witch hunting and gets down to the constructive work of legislation. The committee has enjoyed two years of joy riding, publicity, self-propaganda, freely spending the people's money for the purpose. The committee should be satisfied.

Certainly Congress should not appropriate any more money for it. It should be dissolved now that it has collected all the necessary data for the legislation which the committee had in view when it started its work two years ago. Both President Roosevelt and Attorney General Jackson are right when they clearly intimate that the Dies methods are not only inefficient but are harmful to the administration of justice.

HENRY W. WOLFE.
Washington, Nov. 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Though a Texan, I am not proud of Representative Dies' stunts. In the controversy between him and the Justice Department I am 100 per cent for Justice. The FBI goes about its task quietly and efficiently, without the wholly unnecessary, often harmful, fanfare of publicity usually accompanying the activities of the Dies Committee. I cannot help but feel that Mr. Dies is publicizing himself at the expense of the public. He has used millions of the people's money and is going to ask Congress for another million. This money should be given the FBI.

The Dies methods are un-American. They are contrary to the American way and ideals of life. They make people suspicious and fearful.

We must by all means prevent a sort of competition developing between the Dies Committee and the Justice Department. Mr. Dies' harmful publicity tempts, even compels, Justice to resort to similar tactics which serve no good purpose. Life in America will become unpleasant, even unbearable, as in Nazi Germany or in Soviet Russia, if such competition is permitted to grow unchallenged.

The Dies Committee should be dissolved. Congress should give it no more funds. At the same time Justice should be given more money so that the FBI might be enlarged and made more efficient.

To Be A Poet

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Here is an echo of commendation on your interesting editorial "Upsy-Daisy." I read his Poet's License, too, and it immediately struck me to try Mr. Pegler's sinker, hook and shrimp bait had not the editor promptly used a discriminating eye and froze our versatile columnist's attempt to mount Pegasus so as to be a Paul Revere to the people on the invasion of poets.

Writing poetry may be a fake to Mr. Pegler, but the works of Homer, Ovid, Chaucer, Spenser, Milton, Shakespeare, and many others worthy of the name of poets have stood the test of time. Apparently, poetry is the highest and more lasting method of expression. When it is set to music it becomes immortal and universal. In fact, poetry and music go together beautifully, and there is no faking in their composition.

Reflectively, it is not so easy to be a great poet, although Mr. Pegler might find it simple to rhyme, for the task requires the full use of imagination, a sense of rhythm and melody, and a tremendous reserve of perseverance in the face of adversity and lack of financial market. Above all, poets defy criticism and go on with their art. They dare starve to live and sing of beauty.

Irish Bases

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As an American born in the south of Ireland I should like permission to say a few words anent the much discussed question of Irish bases. Part of my family live in Eire and all of them are Protestants; and all of them favor the attitude of the De Valera government on the question of bases.

Yielding the bases to England would be an act of war on the part of Eire. This would cause the German air armada to reduce Ireland to ashes, without rendering any substantial service to England. Is it fair to ask Eire to make this devastating sacrifice? Eire is wholly unprepared to cope with the German air juggernaut. The bases would be of small value to England. In fact, it might operate to the detriment of England in that it would probably result in cutting off food supplies that England so badly needs.

I am loath to believe other than that there is some implacable enemy of Ireland manufacturing propaganda for dissemination in the United States, the chief purpose of which is to blacken the Irish character in the eyes of Americans. Not so long ago we heard the hue and cry that Hitler was preparing to invade England via Ireland. This cock and bull story was so obviously ridiculous that it was soon dropped as "dud" propaganda. Now, some fertile brain has resurrected the bases as a weapon to malign and blacken the Irish. This will not succeed, because of its manifest absurdity and obvious purpose.

Private Charity

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Governmental and private employers are, as usual, helping to collect contributions for the Community Chest, which is as it should be. That is, which is as it should be in the absence of adequate government protection for our less fortunate fellow citizens.

The program is admittedly too large for private charity to handle. Collected as they are, "voluntary" contributions too often become regressive taxes.

Would we leave the administration of the District's public school or library system to private organizations? Then why do we do so to such a large degree with respect to needy citizens?

Isn't it about time Uncle Sam corrected his miserable record in this matter?

ADOLPH APPLEMAN.

Capitalistic System

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Concerning the letter by Katherine Baylis in The Post, she appears to have little knowledge of the mass of the people who suffer from the capitalistic system in its practical operation and apparently no conception of the insidious working of that system in the formation of character throughout the whole mass of our people.

Without that knowledge it is useless to discuss the question. There is scant hope of betterment in our economic system until action is based on a wide and clear understanding of actual living conditions and sure knowledge of the qualities in the human being which determine those conditions.

For Declaring War

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The December issue of the Reader's Digest contains an article, "Hitler's Branch Offices, U. S. A.," which is perfectly appalling in its revelations of the utterly imbecile way in which our Government, or lack of government, allows Hitler to seize upon our "diplomatic immunity" and abuse it because we thereby "put his chief spies, saboteurs and their files beyond interference."

Didn't we have enough experience in this matter during the first World War? Couldn't the Black Tom case teach us anything?

The amazing thing is that our press, our columnists, our magazines, our legislators have not long raised such a loud and persistent and insistent outcry against it as to compel a withdrawal of this courtesy.

I blame Hitler for nearly everything he does, but I do not blame him for thinking that we are utter simpletons. I should like to see the United States declare war on Germany at once, and then arrest these spies and search them and their files before we pack them back home. Declaring war need not mean sending our infantry overseas. But our ships and planes should go. And while we are going "full speed ahead," why not declare martial law for our factories engaged in making defense supplies?

RESENTFUL.

Has Psychological Answer

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Odd that no one has thought of the psychological aspect in the controversy over whether Lord Lothian in his broadcast from London recently used the word "finance" or "men."

Lord Lothian was distinctly heard to say, "but we also need planes, men, and ships," as was correctly reported by the short-wave recording machine of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

If the radio script handed out by the Ministry of Information and Overseas Propaganda to Lord Lothian for that broadcast read, "but we also need planes, finance, and ships," as the official government news agency declares it did, then there is but one psychological answer:

Lord Lothian might subconsciously have used the word, "men," and was expressing subconsciously a belief, a thought which is so embedded in the minds of great men in times of grave crisis that it sometimes must slip out, and will slip out at the most inopportune time, unfortunately!

"Horse Sense"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The American people have had ample opportunity to become familiar with the methods of both friendly and unfriendly governments to influence public opinion in this country, and to recognize, as such, the barrage of British propaganda, which has been flooding our papers for the last few days. There is no question that the people of the United States are anxious and willing to give aid to Great Britain short of war. However, the feeling is overwhelmingly against taking a more active part than that laid down by the President before the recent election. Several new notes are creeping into the new propaganda, urging measures which have been rejected in the past by Congress and the people. It is to be hoped that we will profit by the knowledge gained in the past and not allow ourselves to be guided by anything except the good horse sense of the American people.

The Post Impressionist

'Wildcatter'

THERE IS NO DOUBT about it, Sam got his start up on the Comstock along with the Big Bonanza. But if he hadn't been such a poor hand at moving the State of Nevada off his silver mine we might not be celebrating his birthday today.

As a miner he wasn't a bad storyteller, and when Dan, the regular feature writer on the Virginia City Territorial Enterprise, left the diggings for a vacation "back in the States," Sam took one last lingering look at his unremunerative prospect hole and decided that he would rather whip his weight in journalistic wildcats than starve to death on a wildcat claim. He went after the job.

Perhaps Joe Goodman, the editor, didn't have any other applicants. Or there may have been something about Sam's wild, bushy hair, or his bedraggled slouch hat, or the clay-smeared trousers stuffed into clumsy, cowhide boots that made Joe think that he had the makings of a star reporter. Anyway he hired him to sub for Dan.

Columnists were free and unharassed by the complexities of advertising then. All bets were off and Sam took over Dan's column, lock, stock and barrel with some of the lustiest bits of journalism yet encountered on the Comstock. He signed his hard-rock stories just "Josh" and Dan returned to find the whole town talking about the "wild humorist of the sagebrush."

For a time it looked as if Dan had been thrown out of the ring by the new champion but with Sam conveniently away for a few days in San Francisco, he took over once more and opened with a mild onslaught beginning, "Through its former writer's absence the moral tone of this column will be much improved." It was the opening blow in the smashing battle of the columns that made both humorists indispensable to the Enterprise and kept the Comstock roaring through the long, cold winter.

Just to keep an eye on each other, Sam and Dan took rooms together. In more ways than one the arrangement added fuel to the fire.

"The fellows that are hired to carry wood up to the rooms, make a mistake nearly every day and pile a lot in our parlor," wrote Dan one day in his column. "I have never seen the fellow making these mistakes but Sam assures me that all the wood gets into our parlor that way . . . it looks very plausible but lately I've been thinking that it was rather strange that the fellow quit making the mistakes the very day that Sam went to Carson to report the proceedings of the Constitutional Convention."

The next day Dan was thrown from his horse and while he suffered only a sprained knee, his roommate reported the "frightful accident" in glowing terms. "Yesterday, my confrere and long-time friend was wrenched from his saddle and thrown 300 yards," he said. "His head caved in out of sight, both arms were indiscriminately broken up until they were jointed like bamboo, and his back was bent into the shape of a rail fence."

The gusto of Sam's artistic exaggeration occasionally took him afield and gave Dan time to get his literary breath. One such outburst, headed "Those Blasted Children" found its way into the New York Sunday Mercury, the first of his writings to be printed in an Eastern periodical. That more of them were not reprinted "back East" was due to Sam's contention that they were "too rough for Eastern readers of the genteel tradition." Consequently much of his early work was lost when the files of the Enterprise were destroyed in the fire that later swept the main part of Virginia City.

The few articles that remain today and are still being discovered as "heretofore uncollected sketches," were reprints of that day in San Francisco's Golden Era. It was this outside demand, perhaps, that led Sam to seek other channels as an outlet for his extraordinary descriptions that were such startling exaggerations of circumstances but never of character. But first, as a literary celebrity of the Western slope he had to find a new signature. "Josh" was too commonplace.

It might have been that he was growing tired of the constant strain of horse-play, practical jokes and robust journalistic fisticuffs that ran rampant in the mining camp, or perhaps, he only wanted to shake the sagebrush from his column. Anyway he chose a name out of his past, from his steamboating days on the Mississippi. It was the call of the leadsman in a difficult channel, two fathoms—safe water—MARK TWAIN. It was a by-line of a career that was to be better known, but far less colorful than the "Josh" days of his wildcatting journalism on the Comstock Lode.

No "Error"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter signed Sequitus must reflect the painful effort many are making to answer Mr. Hoover. Answered he must be, and better than this.

I am one who believes the answer will be made, perhaps has already been made, by the President. This country is not a mere convenient arsenal, and Mr. Roosevelt is not likely to receive requests for help without asking in return that this Nation shall have a voice, now and at the end of the war, in policies affecting our future as well as that of the rest of the world.

In the matter of helping the victims, where they can be helped, I believe he can see better than the British could be expected to. And I do not believe that he has been called a great humanitarian by error. "After him will come many Presidents."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

A Director of Aircraft Production

THANKS to the recent articles of Messrs. Alsop and Kintner we now know that there is solid ground for the general feeling that the armament program is being carried out too slowly because it is not adequately organized. Mr. Leon Henderson's report, from which they have cited excerpts, shows that within the Defense Commission and therefore among the President's most trusted advisers, it is now realized that the most critical defect is "the failure to develop adequate administrative direction of industrial expansion" in the airplane industry. There are the best of reasons for saying that this is also the view of the fighting services themselves.

Once the problem is clearly defined, there is not likely to be serious disagreement about how it can be solved. For an analytical study of the problem will show that the trouble with the existing defense mechanism is not that it is so very wrongly organized for the function which has hitherto been its chief concern: the making of contracts for the manufacture of airplanes. The trouble is that Washington is scarcely organized at all for the function of obtaining rapid production of airplanes after contracts have been signed. There is no authority now in Washington charged with the responsibility of directing the rapid expansion of the airplane industry. Such an authority is very much needed if the industry is not to fall short of what the country has been led to expect from it.

THE NATURE of the problem becomes clear when we realize what is, broadly speaking, the present organization. There are three great and several smaller purchasers in the market for airplanes. There is the Air Corps which is in the War Department. There is the Navy. There is the British government. There are the Chinese, the Greeks, the South Americans. Since the industry cannot supply all the demands of all these purchasers, there is an initial problem of priorities: to decide which of the purchasers shall be allowed to make contracts with which American companies. As between the Army and the Navy there is a joint board which has worked well: it coordinates the demands of the Army and the Navy. As between the United States Government and the British government, and other governments as well, the machinery is in the Treasury but the decision, since it is one of high policy, is with the President. All things considered, these decisions have been made smoothly and there is general satisfaction.

After the decisions are reached, actual contracts are made with manufacturers. They are signed by the War Department, by the Navy, by the British government. The types of planes and of equipment are determined, broadly speaking, by the fighting services themselves but with the advice of production engineers as to what the existing facilities can most readily turn out. Huge contracts have now been negotiated and signed, and in these negotiations Mr. Knudsen has been, so to speak, the great intermediary between private industry and the fighting services. Owing to his eminent abilities, and owing also to an immense amount of careful preparation over many years by the Army and Navy themselves, not much time has been lost in letting the contracts once the Congressional appropriations were available. There has been some loss of time due to causes which have often been discussed in the newspapers but on the whole it must be agreed that the Government has negotiated contracts involving enormous sums of money in a remarkably short period of time.

BUT ONCE the contracts have been let, the problem is to get deliveries, and this is the problem which has now to be solved. The question is this: now that the private companies have their contracts, now that their financial needs and their tax needs have been met, what can and what should the Government do to obtain rapid, uninterrupted, expanding production in the plants? This is the new problem which the existing defense machinery in Washington is not organized to deal with. For the traditional theory of what is called "procurement" is that the fighting services place orders with private firms, and beyond inspecting the deliveries to see that they are according to the specifications, the responsibility for production is left entirely to the managers of the separate companies.

This theory would work well enough if the companies were able to produce as many airplanes as the fighting services cared to buy. But that, of course, is not the case. What is needed is an enormous expansion of the whole airplane industry, and the question is whether this expansion will take place quickly enough if we rely solely upon the separate initiative of separate companies. The British experience since Mr. Churchill displaced Mr. Chamberlain, in fact all experience under war conditions, goes to show that to obtain the rapid expansion of an undeveloped industry, the separate private initiative of separate companies needs to be coordinated and supplemented and directed by an authority which deals with the industry as a whole.

THUS IN THE airplane industry as in any other industry, trade, or profession, there are highly efficient units and there are less efficient ones; there are managers who are resourceful and enterprising and prepared to put the national need first and there are managers who are stuffy, bureaucratic, and not too single-minded; there are plants which know how to fill their needs and there are others which do not know how or have commitments and routines which interfere. The industry as a whole needs, in short, a kind of general staff under someone who knows the industry and has its respect and would, as Director of Aircraft Production, be its guide, counsellor, and general manager.

He would be the spokesman of the industry in relation to Congress, to the Administration, and to other industries—those which supply the aircraft industry and those which compete with it for material, tools, skilled workers. He would be the spokesman of the Nation to the industry, using persuasion, influence, and if necessary authority, to rationalize it—that is to eliminate inefficiency, to work out a cooperative pool of facilities and a division of functions, and to represent it in arranging the principles and the ways and means for insuring not merely uninterrupted production but a high national spirit in its relations with its employes.

THIS, I have reason to think, represents in general the conclusion of men who are dealing with the situation at first hand. Once it is realized that we have passed from the stage of letting contracts to the stage of production, it is self-evident that in a new industry, in an industry which must be developed rapidly if the Nation is to be made secure, in an industry which is as vital to the country as the fleet itself, there must be a responsible Government authority to direct the expansion of the industry. The matter cannot be left where it is now—dependent upon the personal prestige of Mr. Knudsen who has no formal authority and the supervising authority of Army and Navy officers.

There is no need to suggest names for the post: it will be better if the nominations come from the enlightened leaders of the industry, and there are plenty of them, and if the selection is made by the President on the advice of Mr. Knudsen and his associates. What can be said, I think, is that the task will require the full time of a very able man, and that, therefore, Mr. Knudsen himself should not be isolated and specialized in the aircraft industry. He is needed for the general direction of the whole armament program. For problems similar to those which now exist most acutely in the aircraft industry will soon arise elsewhere—in shipbuilding for example. A prompt and lucid solution of the aircraft problem will show the way to the solution in other industries. For in these things one learns to walk by starting to walk.

Truth Is News

SOME OF OUR union leaders and some union publications have been saying that these dispatches reveal an antilabor or antiunion bias. As a friend has pointed out, I am partly at fault because, in reporting and discussing facts, I have not paused at regular intervals to say that my revelations and remarks were not aimed at labor or unionism, as such.

But let's see.

I am sure I take no unfair advantage of the truth in saying that I have proved my two principal contentions, namely, that the C. I. O. has been badly infested with communism in controlling positions and that the A. F. of L. is tolerant to a dangerous degree of racketeering and criminality.

More than a year ago, while covering the ham 'n' eggs election in California, I positively confirmed, from the highest authority on this subject in the State, my conviction that the California C. I. O. was controlled by the Communists.

A FEW DAYS AGO Robert Jackson, our Attorney General, who has been accused of sympathizing with the Communists but never of Red-baiting, announced that the FBI had satisfied itself that the Vultee Aircraft strike had been caused and prolonged by Communist influence. And, notwithstanding the inclusion of communism in the resolution of condemnation adopted by the C. I. O. in Atlantic City, the fact remains that the John L. Lewis faction is principally composed of elements in which the Muscovite influence predominates, including the longshoremen, the transport workers and the newspaper guild.

This fact was freely admitted, in fact savagely alleged, against Lewis in the last days of the Presidential campaign by leaders and publications of the union movement sympathetic with the Roosevelt candidacy. And the President's own suggestion that the Communists were backing Wendell Willkie was based on the known fact that Lewis, who indorsed Willkie, had little following in the C. I. O. other than the Communist.

LEWIS CLAIMS the fierce, personal loyalty of the mine workers, but that union is a Hitleresque dictatorship, politically and financially, which would explode into revolution against him if the suppressed rank and file had the slightest chance.

As to the problems of racketeering and criminality in the A. F. of L., this body admitted the truth, grudgingly, in open session in New Orleans and then adopted a miserable resolution which amounts to nothing more than a confession that the leaders lack the manhood, the courage and the citizenship to kick out of powerful official positions vermin who have lived on the earnings of prostitutes. That is the truth; as anyone who can read simple English may verify from the record. It is not a matter of interpretation but of fact, nor are these evil creatures few.

But even conceding that my contentions have been sustained, I still might be accused of antilabor or antiunion bias. The question is why I presented and hammered away at the facts. Those who accuse me of bias think that theirs is the only possible answer—that I want to destroy the unions and expose labor again to the cruel rapacity of soulless corporations and heartless individual employers.

TO THIS I could, but will not, make the sanctimonious answer that my motive is to help labor clean house and thus to strengthen the unions. There is, however, another answer—my answer. That is that I am a newspaper reporter or journalist and that the truth was news. The truth created arguments, and I answered the arguments. And if I have failed to extol certain unions which profess to be wholly free of Stalinism and reasonably honest, the reason is that they are no better than they should be. They should be loyal to the U. S. A. and absolutely honest.

Those are standard, minimum requirements. We do not hale citizens before the bar in this country to praise them for refraining from treason, prosecution and theft. And when a man is accused of wrong it is no defense to say, "My accuser hates me because I am a vegetarian," or "Thief though I am, say nothing about it lest you embarrass my honest friends." Yet many union leaders and publications attempt to make such defense to plain disclosures concerning unions.

Until about two years ago I was heartily but thoughtlessly and unintelligently in favor of all unions just because they were unions. Since then I have discovered that the American concept of unionism violates some rights of citizenship and property and permits traitorous or ignorant and crooked leaders to menace the safety of the country. I will go into that Monday.

Radio Chains Are Reported Facing Inquiry

Gurney Denounces Rules for Industry Suggested by FCC

The Justice Department was reported considering an antitrust investigation of the radio broadcasting industry yesterday as Senator Gurney (Republican), of South Dakota, assailed the tentative "suggested" regulations for networks by the Federal Communications Commission.

The Associated Press said that it was informed that Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold is eager to start an inquiry to determine whether the Sherman Antitrust Act is being violated by the broadcasting industry.

Charges of monopoly have been hurled at the broadcasting industry, especially the networks, in Congress for several years. It was to offset a Congressional investigation that the FCC almost three years ago instituted a monopoly inquiry.

Oral Hearing Monday

The report of the committee conducting the investigation has not yet been approved by the full commission and on Monday and Tuesday will be the subject of an oral hearing.

Senator Gurney, who as a member of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee has come in contact with the FCC monopoly report during the Thad H. Brown confirmation hearing, criticized the commission's suggested network regulations, which will be considered in the hearing next week.

Calling attention of the Senate to an article in The Washington Post, Senator Gurney said that the regulations were based on the monopoly report, which was "severely criticized and generally discredited because of its inaccuracy and demonstrable bias" in the Brown hearing.

"The proposed rules would strangle, if not impose a death sentence upon, the established networks which render such outstanding broadcasting service to the people of the country and which, in fact, are the backbone of all broadcasting service.

Suggests Investigation

"What is our country coming to when a commission proposes regulations in excess of its authority when it has made no finding of abuses?

"To the contrary, the public appreciation of the services rendered by the networks is probably greater and more widely spread than the public appreciation for any other industry."

Senator Gurney added that "perhaps the only cure would be a complete investigation of the commission by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

Gurney placed in the Record copies of the letters of President Roosevelt and Wendell L. Willkie praising the radio industry on the occasion of its twentieth anniversary dinner last Tuesday night.

U. S. Employment Highest Since 1929, Says Miss Perkins

Secretary Perkins reported yesterday that an increase in employment of more than 250,000 between mid-September and mid-October had boosted the number of employes to the highest level since 1929.

The total employed in nonagricultural jobs last month, she said, was nearly 37,000,000 and was approximately 1,150,000 more than were working in October of last year.

Miss Perkins noted that the major part of the gain was in the manufacturing industries, which added 180,000 workers, a gain of 2 per cent in contrast with an expected seasonal decline of 0.4 per cent.

Factory pay rolls increased nearly $8,000,000 from September to October, a gain of 2.8 per cent compared with an expected seasonal increase of 1.6 per cent.

The industrial East North Central area showed the largest gain compared with October last year.

Green Predicts U.S. Will Adopt 30-Hour Week

Convention Assails Hoffman Plan to Cut Federal Salaries

By James Marlow

Associated Press Staff Writer

New Orleans, Nov. 29.—A. F. of L. President William Green today predicted that when adjustments are made at the end of the defense program American workers would go on a 30-hour week.

Green made the assertion to the American Federation of Labor which ended its two-week convention after deciding to help strengthen hemisphere defense by promoting cooperation among the free trade union groups of the Americas.

In other action the convention opposed as "vicious" a bill introduced in Congress by Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, calling for a pay cut for all Government employes outside those in the armed forces or exempted from salary reduction by the Constitution.

Would Cut Pay Up to 35 Per Cent

Hoffman's measure called for reductions ranging from 10 per cent on $1,000 up to 35 per cent on $10,000 or over.

The committee report approved by the convention declared, "We determinedly are opposed to another vicious downward reduction in the salaries of American people. . . .

"We are faced with a national situation. We will do our part to see the integrity of America retained . . . and also insure that the national defense shall not be used for unnecessary and unjust attacks on democratic rights and conditions."

The A. F. of L., which first advocated the 6-hour day, 30-hour week eight years ago, re-affirmed its indorsement of that working schedule but made no recommendation that it be put into effect now.

Noting the need for speedy rearmament, the convention unanimously approved a committee report declaring "high productivity in this country makes the 40-hour week both possible and necessary."

The Only Solution

"I predict," Green said, "that the day is not far distant when the industrialists of the country will be recognizing as the only solution the remedy that we propose—the 30-hour week and 6-hour day.

"They may do it unwillingly and reluctantly, but they accepted the 40-hour week unwillingly and reluctantly. But we will produce under a 30-hour week just as efficiently as we are now. That is a part of the national economy."

The adopted International Labor Relations Committee report, pointing out that the Pan-American Federation of Labor has not been functioning in the last year, said the A. F. of L. would help rebuild it.

The committee further suggested that the A. F. of L. should take the "initiative in calling together the Western Hemisphere governments to properly celebrate" in 1942 the 450th anniversary of the discovery of America.

The First Airplane Makes A Complaint

("London.—The airplane first flown by the Wright brothers at Kitty Hawk, N. C., in 1903 and for years in a museum here, has been removed to a safer place."—News item.)

To think I started all this!
Is my face red!
Have I that guilty feeling!
Oh, boy!

Thirty-seven years ago at Kitty Hawk—
(It seems only yesterday)—
My wings lifted man off the ground
And made the dream of centuries
A reality!

I rose above the sand dunes,
Laboriously and full of creaks,
And stayed aloft 59 seconds to amaze
The country and the world;
Man acclaimed me joyously . . .
"This means progress!" he said;
"This means I shall know the joy
Of the lark, the grandeur of the eagle!
This is a new symbol of Freedom!"

I was the proud mother hen;
I wasn't much to look at, comparatively;
I was bony and full of angles;
I was Plain Jane, and no glamour girl,
The great things were predicted for me . . . .

But what a brood I hatched! . . .
What a bad gal I turned out to be! . . .
What a mess I made of things! . . .

I was born to bring joy and happiness—
To fulfill dreams; to bring man to
New heights of nobility;
I was to glorify Life and Progress, and
I have brought Death, Misery and Horror.

Where once I looked down on
The peaceful sands of Kitty Hawk,
Now I look down on rivers of blood,
And acres of desolation in many lands.

Then I gazed to earth and beheld
The bright face of Man, aglow with delight,
His eyes kindled by triumph and the
Sense of a fulfillment . . .
Now I look and see his unturned face
Filled with fear and anguish;
Now do his haunted eyes register
Torment and apprehension.

Put me where you will now!
Mine is the ultimate ignomy:
The Mother of All Airplanes
Hidden from her brood—
Protected from her offspring,
Lest she be desolated!

Kitty Hawk, December 17, 1903 . . .
Coventry, November, 1940!

Lead me out into the open fields,
In the sunlight! Drag me out upon
The windswept dunes!
And let my own destroy me!
I do not care now!

Let the flames consume me,
That out of the ashes I may arise
From all the follies of war,
To take shape anew as an instrument
Of attainment and progress
In the blessed paths of peace!

Why They Fainted

This department hears the story of a father who is still startled by the reply of his 5-year-old son during confirmation services. The church form requires that a candidate for confirmation choose an additional middle name. This was explained to the youngster who seemed a little slow grasping the idea. "You may choose a middle name. Wouldn't you like one?" he was asked.

"Yes," the boy said.

"What will it be?"

"Machine Gun," was the devastating reply.

Ways To Aid Britain

By Mark Sullivan

New Kinds of Help Suggested

NEITHER in Congress nor in the Administration are there signs of new kinds of help for Britain. The "new kinds" frequently suggested are two—money, and mercantile ships. If these new helps are to emerge, it will have to be upon the initiative of either President Roosevelt or Congress. From neither does such initiative seem immediately likely. In Congress there is sentiment for action, but not enough without a lead from Mr. Roosevelt first. And Mr. Roosevelt shows no present sign of giving the lead. It is a kind of stalemate. Congress is not likely to act without recommendation from the President; the President is not likely to make the recommendation until he is sure of sufficient sentiment in Congress to back it up.

Of the two suggested new kinds of help, ships would probably come first. By this is meant, ships in a special sense. Britain already has the privilege, and exercises it, of buying ships from American owners, ordering ships from American yards. The new kind of help proposed is that American owners of ships should take on cargoes in America—of food, munitions, whatnot—and deliver them to British ports. This is now forbidden, by the neutrality law we enacted last year—an American ship owner or captain who should do this would be subject to fine and imprisonment.

THE NEUTRALITY law which puts this prohibition on our ship owners, is novel, extreme. It was, when passed, an extraordinary departure by any nation. Under international law, American ships had—and still have, if there is any such thing as international law left—the right to carry cargoes to a belligerent (subject to being held up by the blockade of the other belligerent, and having the cargo seized if it was what international law calls contraband).

When we abandoned this right under international law, it was upon the theory that we would voluntarily place an extraordinary limitation upon ourselves, tie our own hands, in the hope that this would minimize the chance of our getting involved in war. It was part of that almost hysterical wish for neutrality and isolation that dominated us during several years until recently. Had we not passed that law last fall, probably we would not, in our changed mood, pass it now. But the law is there. To give this kind of help to Britain, there must first be action by Congress, repeal of this part of the neutrality law. Such action by Congress is not immediately in sight. Though, as has happened in the past, some startling event abroad, something giving evidence of drastic need for ships by Britain, might lead to action any time.

At to money for Britain, that could come from two sources—from our Government or from American citizens and bankers. Money from our Government would require an act of Congress. But there is no thought of money from our Government. The current talk is about money from American citizens and bankers, credit from American corporations.

HERE, TOO, as about ships, we are under a statutory prohibition, self-imposed. Under international law, any American citizen could loan money to a belligerent. But in our highly emotional drive for neutrality and peace last year, we made it a crime for an American citizen to lend to a belligerent. (This is embodied in the neutrality law, and is partly duplicated by another law, the Johnson Act).

The theory was that if Americans loaned money to a belligerent, we would become interested in that belligerent winning, so that it could repay the loan. That—so we were told by the pacifists last year—is how bankers get us into war. In order to be free from such temptation to partisanship, freer from likelihood of getting involved in the war, we put this prohibition on our citizens. It seems a little fantastic now, when probably nine-tenths of our people are as partisan as they could possibly be, many so passionately partisan that they would like to declare war. But the law against loans is there, and would have to be repealed before our people could make loans to, or give credits to, Britain.

In Washington the common feeling is that there is no hurry about this, that Britain still has funds. We are not likely to legalize loans and credits until Britain gets closer to the bottom of her barrel. Yet we are likely to do it before the barrel is completely empty—it is not to our interest that Britain should completely exhaust her financial resources.

EVEN THOUGH Britain still has money, it would be an immense advantage to her to get credit and loans in the United States. If she were not obliged to pay cash for what she buys here, she could use her cash to advantage elsewhere. In the conduct of a practically world-wide war, cash is to Britain as serviceable as guns or planes. She could hold friendly nations, such as Turkey, closer to her by buying products there, and paying cash. Similarly she could promote good will for her cause among remaining neutrals in Europe and throughout Asia and Africa.

What is said here is wholly about proposed new forms of help to Britain, ships and finance. The forms of help already under way, continue under way, in the largest volume that is practicable. American manufacturers of planes and other munitions are permitted and encouraged to ship the maximum share of their output to Britain that is consistent with prudent regard for our own needs. In every practicable way, Britain gets American cooperation and help.

Procope Tells Of Finland's Need Of Food, Medicine

"Finland badly needs assistance from abroad to keep life going on."

Hjalmar J. Procope, the Finnish Minister, told the annual dinner gathering of the Finnish-American Society this Thursday night at the Kenesaw Hotel. His message was translated from the Finnish yesterday as a public statement. The Minister stressed Finland's need of fats, cereals, cotton and medical supplies.

He pointed out that while Finland recently has concluded transit agreements with Russia and Germany, "Finland is not occupied by Russia or Germany, and there are no foreign garrisons in the country."

Presented to the group at the dinner were Verner Hogback, a carpenter, of 922 Longfellow Street Northwest, who was in Finland when the war started and served with the Finnish army against the Russians for seven months. Previously he had lived in Washington for nine years.

Irvin Laity, president of the Finnish-American Society, was the toastmaster. More than 100 persons attended the dinner.

Four U.S. Agencies Join in Building Of 6,750 Homes

Four Government agencies will share in building the newest of the Government's national defense housing projects, Federal Works Administrator Carmody announced yesterday.

Plans for 6,750 defense dwellings were approved earlier this week by President Roosevelt, and Carmody said yesterday that the assignment would be shared between his own office, the Public Buildings Administration, United States Housing Authority and the Navy.

The project includes 650 homes at Indian Head, Md., to take care of workers at the Naval Powder Factory, and these will be constructed under the Public Buildings Administration. Also assigned to the PBA were 300 dwellings at New London, Conn., and 950 at Vallejo, Calif.

+ or −? Tuberculosis remains one of the most terrifying of diseases, though much has been accomplished in recent years toward prevention, diagnosis and treatment.

Moved by the death from this cause of one of his pupils, Principal Hugh S. Smith, of Jefferson Junior High School, recently requested the District Tuberculosis Association to perform tests on the students, teachers and cafeteria personnel.

Accordingly, on Wednesday of this week 190 pupils and 18 teachers and dining room helpers subjected their arms to the tuberculin test. Children undergoing the examination had first obtained their parents' consent and the project had been approved by the school's P.-T. A. chapter.

DR. LEONARDO

Yesterday the results were read by Dr. Alexander C. Leonardo, who made the tests. He discovered positive reactions among 33 pupils, 2 teachers and 2 cafeteria workers.

This, it must be emphasized, means only that the "positives" have at one time or another harbored tuberculosis bacilli in their bodies. It does not necessarily follow that they are, or ever were, actually infected.

Next step in the investigation comes on Wednesday when the 37 positive reactors will receive free X-ray examinations. By this means it can be told definitely whether their chests are in good condition or not.

Navy News—Lieut. Comdr. William R. Terrell, popular aide to the commandant at the Washington Navy Yard, has been transferred to sea duty, effective January 6, it was announced yesterday.

He will take command of the destroyer Tucker at a West Coast station.

Terrell has served at the Navy Yard here for the past 18 months. His successor at the assignment here has not been announced.

Terrell was born in Denison, Tex., on June 17, 1901, and entered the Naval Academy, under a Texas appointment, in 1918. He was graduated as an ensign on June 3, 1922, and subsequently served aboard the U. S. S. Arkansas, the Brooks and the Saratoga. From 1936 to 1939 he was executive officer of the U. S. S. Reid.

Two submarines, painted black as night and of old design, have crept up the river and tied up at the Navy Yard docks for a protracted visit. They are the S-26 and the S-30, said to have been built 20 years ago and to have been out of service until the national emergency sent them back afloat.

The S-26 will remain at the yard about three weeks; the S-30 will stay two months. The subs were brought here from New London, Conn., to be inspected.

Nelson Eddy Fan Sees One Picture Of His 24 Times

WASHINGTON'S most ardent Nelson Eddy fan is Shirley Winston, American University junior, who lives at 4608 Forty-sixth Street Northwest. Shirley wandered into "Naugh-Marietta," the star's first picture, with nary a suspicion of the effect it would have on her life. She subsequently saw the show 24 times, and when "Rose-Marie" was released she went to that 19 times. She once sat through Moon" in one day. She's been three showings of "New to "Bittersweet" only once—so far.

Shirley Winston

Partly because of her admiration of Eddy, she started singing lessons two years ago, but denies that she plans to suggest a duet if she ever meets him. She says the principal reason she goes to his pictures so often is that she gets discouraged with her progress; his singing inspires her to return to her scales with renewed enthusiasm. She goes with a young man who sings, too, and who also, by good fortune, is an ardent admirer of Eddy.

CANDOR DEPT.—You may have noticed, if you've ever looked up a Congressmen under "Members' Addresses" in the Congressional Directory, that some of the lawmakers' names are preceded by various hieroglyphics. The explanation, according to a note at the beginning of the list, is that one symbol designates "those whose wives or husbands accompany them;" another, "those whose unmarried daughters in society accompany them," and a third, "those having other ladies with them."

"Raising a President," a weekly radio program sponsored by the Children's Bureau, consists in part of a skit broadcast from New York depicting the life of an average American family. Timothy Young is 8, Dotty is 4 and Baby Billy (who stood up last week for the first time) is about 8 months. Their childish trebles are convincingly youthful, and mothers who hear them may have wondered who the young actors are. The truth is that, because of child labor regulations heartily indorsed by the Children's Bureau, real youngsters cannot work during school hours. So the parts of Timothy, Dotty and Baby Billy are portrayed by midgets with undeveloped voices.

'One-Evening-Gown' Woman Must Buy on Long Term Plan

Stark white for a dramatic yet conservative evening dress is a wise choice for the coming season. The dress above, worn by Movie Star Gail Patrick, features a straight skirt with gathered front fullness. A midriff of fluted silver beads repeats the same motif in staccato effect at the shoulders and on the sleeves. White fox has been chosen to complete the costume. A wide diamond and ruby bracelet is the only jewelry accent

White, if Becoming, Offers Good Choice, May Appear in New Guise the Next Season; Jacket Dresses Practical

WITH the social season getting under way in Washington, the question many a woman is facing is what kind of an investment to make in her evening dress.

For those who buy one dress a season, a white dress is a perfect way out of many perplexing degrees of dressing. In white you can be vivid without being conspicuous. Friends will remember an impression of you well dressed, but will forget details.

With covered arms you will not appear too formal when some men wear white ties, some black. Then, too, covered arms are a perfect foil for jewelry. White bears repeating dozens of wearings a season because it is so versatile. A dress of simple draped fluid lines will be unmarked by fashion fads. It will last a season and still retain its style. Next season, if you are tired of it, it can be dyed. A change of jewels or some clever gadget will add a sparkle of life.

Fabrics also play a role in the dress you select. Flat weave fabrics are less noticeable than rough or novelty crepes. A flat crepe in silk or a rayon jersey is a wise choice. These also make suitable background for jewelry changes. Better use in moderation such fabrics as rayon nets, tulle, metal shot fabrics, lame, faille and satins. These fabrics are pleasant to the eye, but easily remembered.

Fabrics Play Role

When Mother Nature is generous in the wrong places, she plays havoc with many dress fancies. Perhaps you are rather short with a concentration of a few extra pounds—wear front fullness, inconspicuous jewelry or accessories, and flat crepes. A full-length wrap will add inches to your height, while most furs will whittle you down. For fabric whims, fluffy tulles and nets are taboo, whether you wear your dress a season or an evening. Stark white is best out of favor with you. Try off-whites and softened shades in more subdued colors. Avoid sharp contrasts and bright colors.

If you are tall and willowy, your "don'ts" are a bit different. You, too, will wear front fullness, but very much in moderation—just enough to keep you from appearing too severe. You have a free rein with accessories and jewelry. Try a bright belt on white. No need for you to fear being cut in two.

Fluffy Fabrics Out

In fact, it's a happy thought to make you appear inches shorter. You are probably not the type, so don't try fluffy fabrics. Providing your wardrobe selection bears variety, select fabrics with more body than flat crepes and jersey. Try failles or heavy velvets. Dresses of these can also be kept simple in design and suitable for a season's wear. Yours is a more lenient color budget. Warmer, brighter colors are not ruled out, if worn in moderation. For your wrap, furs are approved. You wear them well for their broadening effect. Above all—"Don't wear stripes!"

Evening dresses in general bear out the creed that "artificiality is giving way to naturalness." Waistlines are being lowered and bodices are showing looser or easier lines. The closely fitted hipline, a well-liked style, is contrasted in other dresses with draperies through the hips. This performs a function in shaping the rounded contours of average figures in terms of the slim and narrow silhouette. As for the fabrics, jersey, rayon and silk crepe, nets, chiffons and sheer wools are the most popular of the season. The cover-up effect tends even to formal evening attire.

Meat Pie Crust

You can pep up crusts for meat or chicken pies by mixing in with the dry ingredients ¼ teaspoon each of chopped parsley, celery salt and paprika for each 2 cups of flour used.

Baldness Cure Works on Mice; Liver Extract Found Effective

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU were a mouse instead of a man, science might have a cure for baldness waiting for you. Experiments by Dr. D. N. Wooley, of the hospital of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, seem to point to phytin, which is found in both liver and cereals, as the factor important to the staying power of the hair.

In research with mice which had lost their hair in patches, the use of a liver extract turned out to be the perfect restorative. Dr. Wooley then went on a chemical hunt to discover just what it was in the liver that proved so effective. It developed that phytin, the salt of inositol acid, was the antibaldness factor.

Conservative as always, science emphasizes the fact that the restorative might not work out as well for men as it did for mice. But hair is hair. And some day there may be a cure or a preventive that will take the place of toupees. At any rate, it is significant that the answer is being sought in diet.

Gray Hair and Vitamin B

From your letters, it is evident that you are also keenly interested in the problem of grayness, and here again I regret to report that no definite dietary cure has been found. Extensive experiments point to the vitamin B complex, however, as the dietary essential. The evidence indicates that some member of this group has a direct connection with pigmentation of the hair.

In these experiments also mice were the principals. The research was conducted at the University of California and the substance in vitamin B designated as the filtrate factor was separated from the other components of vitamin B so that its effect alone might be studied. After ten weeks on a diet lacking in the filtrate factor, the fur of the animals began to turn gray. When the factor was replaced in the diet, their fur began to darken.

This substance is present in liver, bran, yeast, alfalfa and a number of vegetables.

These experiments are by no means conclusive. It does not follow that we have only to take phytin to grow hair on bald heads or to include the filtrate factor in the diet to keep from turning gray.

If you say "Phooey! They don't know how to cure baldness or grayness," you're right. They don't. But the results do establish the importance of numerous dietary factors—many of them still the subject of intensive research—to the general appearance.

Lacking in Many Foods

In the past few years, experiments have consistently shown the average diet to be deficient in vitamin B. Although vitamin B is contained in many foods, it is lacking in such everyday staples as white flour, rice, macaroni, starches, sugars and fats. Also, with the exception of the glandular organs, heart muscle and pork, it is not present in large amounts in meats. These staples which do not furnish vitamin B comprise a large part of our daily fare.

How can we make sure of getting more of this vitamin? By the use of whole grain bread, or white bread which has been reinforced with vitamin B; by the use of whole-grain cereals—those which contain all the wheat, and by not cooking the vegetables too long and not using soda in the water in which they are cooked, and by utilizing this vegetable water.

The whole grains are the richest food sources of vitamin B. Supplementary sources are dried brewers' yeast, wheat germ and thiamin chloride. The experiments may prove that some of these supplements must be added to our daily diet if we continue to take refined foods.

Mary Haworth's Mail

'Perfect Gentleman' Makes No Headway With Girl He Loves; Her Unconventional Theories About Courtship Shake His Faith in Idealist Code

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I would like your views on the following problem, which seems to be the crux of my present troubled life. The girl is 32, a college graduate of great intellectual ability, artistic nature, fine instincts, strong emotions and proud, independent temperament. She is a librarian, a natural student with varied interests, and she lives in her own apartment.

I am 38, have a good high school education and my full share of native ability and endowments, high ideals and high strung but repressed emotional temperament. I have an [illegible] position as sales engineer, which involves some traveling.

We have been the closest of friends for about eight years and from the first I have loved her with all my heart. She has often said she is very fond of me, enjoys my companionship, and has found me to be of great help to her—but that she is not in love with me. I have acted the gentleman on all occasions, and other than permitting a goodnight kiss, she has always (at least outwardly) repulsed any further expressions of my affection.

Yet, I happen to know that she has been involved in several more or less transitory affairs during the past two years. I even went so far as to charge her openly about her conduct, once last summer. This was met with a flat denial at the time. But recently she has intimated, by various indirect remarks, that such is the case. She argues the importance of a "realistic approach to marriage."

In response to questioning, she admits that she is not happy, but she considers it possible for her to develop spiritual love and a fair measure of happiness by the use of good philosophy after she is sure of sexual compatibility. My convictions have always been just the opposite. While conceding the immense importance of such "compatibility," I have considered it to be simply a matter of proper adjustment after marriage.

But I am no longer convinced that my idealistic continence has been for the best. Health and nerves have suffered, I am sure, and I would act on this girl's philosophy if I thought it would break our present stalemate. At the same time, I am well aware that such a move might lead to greater estrangement and more serious frustration for myself, owing to the disparity in our emotional experience. Perhaps I am crazy even to consider the idea. What's the answer?

DESPERATE

Girl Confuses Love With Sensuality

DEAR DESPERATE: Genuine, enduring sexual compatibility is founded upon—and is, indeed, the expression of—psychic compatibility, by which is meant true friendship of mind and spirit. Any union, whether illicit or legally sanctioned, that is based on the lure of the flesh alone, can yield only short-term happiness at best, and no real growth in the relationship for either individual.

Your girl friend is a muddling theorist who confuses sensory excitement with love, who mistakes one part for the whole, and whose supposed "realistic approach to marriage" is merely an aimless yielding to the fleshly temptations of the hour—not at all calculated to teach her the meaning, or bring the reality, of the love she seeks. So long as she continues to act on her present half-baked philosophy, so long will she continue to attract unto herself second-raters of the opposite sex, who will further confuse her by their shallow or expedient actions and utterances.

Your long-time conviction that love is a dedication of one's whole personality to the objective of serving another's happiness—and that "sexual compatibility" is a secondary matter of thoughtful and tender physical adjustment—this conviction is absolutely in line with the Facts of Life, as applied to man, distinct from the animal.

I believe that any awkward and desperate, self-betraying efforts on your part to win this girl's heart by premarital intimacy would be, for you, a humiliating failure. I believe the result would be exactly what you anticipate, namely: "Greater estrangement and more serious frustration for yourself." So what's the answer? The answer, I think, is either to persuade the girl to marry you; or, if she positively will not, to have done with her. Go off and forget her. Put yourself out of influence range of her sophomoric and tantalizing rationalization of her selfish, sensualistic evasion of love's real meaning and purpose.

Purchasing Fruits By Weight, Not Unit, Gains Favor

Buying all fresh fruits and vegetables by weight instead of count is a revolution in American marketing habits which is rapidly taking the country by storm, according to evidence from various sources. The new method has so many practical advantages over the old way that it meets little resistance wherever it starts.

Although it has actually been in process for some time, notably in the case of apples, peas, string beans, berries and potatoes, and always in the case of meats like lamb chops, buying by weight is only now spreading to include all fruits and vegetables, according to a bulletin from the Better Business Bureau of Los Angeles, parent city of many new ideas.

"Exact full value, every piece, every purchase," this bulletin gives as the basic purpose of buying by weight. Watermelons, for example, vary widely. If sold by the unit, the consumer would pay as much for a small one as for a big one. No two heads of lettuce are ever identical in size, and should not be sold by count, but by weight. Oranges are an excellent case in point, since a dozen of one kind will contain much more juice than a dozen of another kind. Juice weighs heavy, skin and pulp weigh light.

Home Washers Increase

It is estimated that there are between 15,000,000 and 20,000,000 home washers in use every week of the year. Ironers are a more recent invention and have not yet climbed to the same figures, but are increasingly becoming part of the well-equipped modern home. Today's homemakers look upon these labor savers not as luxuries but as household necessities which advance the standard of living, save the housewife time and effort, and enable her to take a more adequate part in social and community affairs.

Choose Vitamins For Beauty

YEARS difference between them, you'd say. The woman who looks so radiantly, healthily young—her eyes shining, her skin clear. And another looks so old.

But the real difference between them is vitamins—the subject of our new booklet.

Reading it, you will find out many things about your diet, perhaps that it isn't nearly so well balanced as you thought. You may rely too much on food low in vitamins—white bread, bacon, beets. You may not have enough of vitamin-rich foods such as liver, whole wheat bread, beet greens.

Once vitamins were unheard of. It was a mystery why children had rickets, why many people had one could after another, why some women suffered constantly from nerves, poor appetites. Now we know that these ills can often be prevented, even cured, by eating a vitamin-high diet.

The Vitamin D in butter, egg yolk and cod liver oil will keep your child from having rickets. The Vitamin A in green and yellow fruits and vegetables will help you combat colds. And foods high in Vitamin B1, like whole wheat cereals and cabbage, help to keep nerves and appetite in tiptop form.

How to plan a vitamin-rich diet for yourself and your family? It's easy with a vitamin table to guide you. And when you know a trick or two can step up vitamin content, make meals even tastier.

Get the benefit of the best vitamin information. Our new 40-page booklet, "Vitamins for Health and Beauty," explains why you ned Vitamins A, B, C, D, E, G. Gives vitamin table, vitamin-high menus, also cooking methods to retain vitamins. Has pointers for reducers, pregnant mothers, mothers of young children. Gives information on minerals, too.

Society Turns Out in Full Force For the Debut of Miss Kitty Hill

Mrs. Hiram Bingham Presents Daughter At Afternoon Party From 5 to 7; 40 Baskets of Flowers Adorn Room

VIRTUALLY ALL of residential Washington society streamed into 1818 R Street yesterday afternoon sometime between 5 and 7. And most of the guests seemed to have sent bouquets to the pretty debutante, Miss Kitty Hill, whose mother, Mrs. Hiram Bingham, and former Senator Bingham, presented her to society at a tea.

At least 40 baskets of flowers were arranged around the living room. Even more floral offerings decorated the dining room and hall. Mrs. Bingham has made her home in Washington for many years and numbers friends in every one of the many groups which make up society in the Capital. Miss Hill is the third and youngest of the daughters whom she has presented here in the past few years.

All ages and sizes were represented at the party. When the last guest had departed, the hosts adjourned to the Metropolitan Club, where they carried on with a dinner for the pretty, dark-haired debutante.

Miss Hill's frock of white georgette had a full skirt and a taffeta bodice set off with a jacket and a large bow at the neckline. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet. Mrs. Bingham chose a dress of French blue brocade made on medieval lines with mink trimming the square neckline. The two older sisters of the deb, Mrs. Phillips H. Clarke and Mrs. Alexander Phillips, of New York, were on hand to assist their mother, and earnestly studied the slips of paper on which were names of the tea pourers. These included Mrs. Walter Denegre, Mrs. Alexander Hagner, Mrs. Buchanan Merryman, Mme. van Kaathoven (in black with gold dots and a black velvet beret); Mrs. George T. Pettingill, who gave a dinner for her niece, Miss Peggy Wagner, last night before the Maddox dance; Mrs. John Caswell, Mrs. Frank Letts, Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney, Mrs. Duncan Cameron, Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, Mrs. Mahlon Pitney, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, who wore black with a white lace collar; Mrs. James Clement Dunn, who was in brown with a matching hat trimmed with birds; Mrs. Sidney Cloman, in black velvet, and Mrs. Eldridge Jordan.

Also taking a turn at the tea table was Mrs. George A. Garrett, who topped off her suit with a tiny hat fashioned of pink rose petals.

Several girls home from school for the week-end assisted Miss Hill. Miss Mariana Evans, here from Simmons College for the Massachusetts Thanksgiving, wore a bright red dress. Miss Louise Stillwell chose a frock of black faille with inserts of pink at the neck and waistline.

Senator Green Seen in Throng

Others who assisted Miss Hill were Miss Elaine Darlington, who will have a coming out dance tonight at the Sulgrave Club; Miss Eugenia Merrill, Miss Peggy Lansdowne, who wore a dark red outfit, floor length; Miss Sita Finkenstaedt, Miss Zeva Fish, whose black dress was topped off with a brilliant red wool jacket; Miss Marcy Morgan, and Miss Bella Hagner, subdebutante daughter of Mrs. Randall Hagner.

Mrs. Bingham didn't join the receiving line, but instead mingled about among the guests seeing that all had a good time. Among the few members of officialdom present was Senator Theodore Francis Green, of Rhode Island, who very rarely finds time to attend an afternoon party. He stood in the hall and chatted with Mrs. Letts.

Mrs. Jouett Shouse, whose daughter, Miss Joan Dodd, will be presented at a party on New Year's Day, compared notes with Mrs. Garnett. Mrs. Shouse wore a long mink stole with her black dress.

Arriving hatless and escorted by John Galliher, Miss Evalyn McLean looked smart in black with a jacket of red fox. The deb's sisters, Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Phillips, were dressed respectively in emerald green velvet with a gold lame jacket, and a gold colored frock with a jeweled girdle and jeweled trimming at the heartshaped neckline.

Social Washington There Full Force

From living room to library: Miss Carolyn Nash, topping off her black frock with a silver fox jacket . . . Ellen Hewes Flowerree, who with Miss Nancy Glover and two beaux will attend the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia today . . . Miss Dorothy Borden chatting with Nathan Bartlett . . . Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm McConihe wending their way through the throng . . . Clarence Hewes, Meade Patrick and James Parks among the extra men . . . Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, who says her daughter, Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, jr., will join her on Sunday with her little baby, Emily. Mr. McLean will arrive later in time to spend Christmas with his family.

Mrs. Clifton Phillips, in smart black and a hat to match trimmed with blue piping . . . Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt . . . Mrs Emil Hurja, with a brief fur jacket over her dress . . . Mrs. Churchill Candee and her granddaughter, Miss Mary Churchill Mathews . . . George Williams getting a lady a cocktail . . . and dozens and dozens of others.

One of the most stunning fur jackets in the room was Miss Stellita Stapleton's. It's sable, an advance Christmas present, and was decidedly one of the prettiest coats on parade.

Macdonnells Get Surprise

Twin "Bundles for Britain," both girl less than two days old, are taking the spotlight at Garfield Hospital. They are daughters of the Second Secretary of the Canadian Legation and Mrs. Ronald Macdonnell who, it seems, had no warning that the stork was winging their way with a double load.

Like any other expectant mother, Mrs. Macdonnell had carefully chosen a layette, but only for one child. Fortunately, however, she made her purchase from a firm that has "twin insurance" against such an emergency; so soon there will be sent to Mrs. Macdonnell a duplicate of every small garment she purchased.

Fate took another hand in helping to provide a wardrobe for the children. Mme. Dimitriu, whose husband is Assistant Financial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation, had a premonition that the Macdonnells would have twins, so she gave Mrs. Macdonnell a double set outfit—caps, jackets and crib covers—one in blue and the other in pink.

The girls, born Thursday afternoon, have been named Mary Edds and Margaret Kirts. Mr. and Mrs. Macdonnell have another child, a son—Logie, who is 2 years old.

Capt., Mrs. Maddox Give Dance For Their Debutante Daughter

Prominent Young People From Newport And New York Attend Gay Function At Sulgrave Club in Honor of Miss Muriel

Practically a whole carload of prominent young people from New York and Newport learned last night that we know how to give parties in Washington, too. The out-of-towners were here for the gay dance at which Capt. and Mrs. Charles Hamilton Maddox entertained for their debutante daughter, Miss Muriel Maddox. The family has a home at the Rhode Island resort and Miss Muriel bowed to society there last summer at a dance under a striped marquee on the lawn.

The only flaw in last night's party was the absence of the debutante's father, who recently underwent an operation at the Naval Hospital here. Because of war time conditions, Mrs. Maddox kept the list down to a fairly small one, as such things go, and young people were in the majority.

White, the traditional shade for debutantes as well as brides, was the motif used in the decorations at the party. Feathery chrysanthemums lined the paneled walls of the ballroom of the Sulgrave Club and festooned the glittering crystal chandeliers. The big mirror in the ballroom was massed in green smilax, which was also wound around the balustrade of the curving stairway which lead's to the club's main rooms.

Mrs Maddox and her daughter received at the top of the stairs, against a background of the masses of flowers of all kinds and colors which had been sent the popular deb. The latter, who is dark-haired and slender, chose for the occasion a gown of white Duchess satin made with a hooped skirt and off-the-shoulder neckline. Around the neck and down the back of the dress was an openwork pattern of camellias edged with glittering rhinestones, and the deb had placed a creamy camellia in her hair. She carried a muff of white satin covered with these flowers.

Buffet Supper Given at Midnight

Moonstone blue silk net fashioned Mrs. Maddox's frock, which was made with a full skirt and tight bodice and appliqued with sparkling paillettes. A corsage of white orchids, purple-tipped, completed her ensemble.

The dancers whirled about the ballroom to the music of Sidney's Orchestra. Additional entertainment was furnished by Cliff Hall, talented singer and pianist with Meyer Davis' Orchestra, who strummed away in one of the small rooms downstairs.

Promptly at midnight a buffet supper was served. A long table centered with white mums was spread with covered dishes of steaming bouillon, platters of cold turkey and Smithfield ham, and other delicacies popular at midnight suppers.

Several dinners preceded the dance, but Miss Maddox didn't attend any of them. She had such a heavy social schedule in the afternoon that her mother decided enough was enough, and that a little rest before the dance would be a good idea.

Several Dinners Precede Dance

Mr. and Mrs. C. Mathews Dick, who, like the Maddoxes, are prominently identified with Newport, entertained a group of friends prior to the ball. Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Bingham feted 26 young people at the Metropolitan Club in honor of the latter's debutante daughter, Miss Kitty Hill.

Miss Francesca Villa, Newport glamour girl and daughter of Count and Countess Alfonso Villa, was among the out-of-towners who got a big rush on the dance floor. Warmly welcomed after a long absence from Washington was Miss Jane Pope, daughter of Mrs. John Russell Pope and the late Mr. Pope, famous architect, who designed the Mellon Gallery and other Washington buildings. Jane spent part of a winter here several seasons ago and was very popular.

The Hon. Noreen Stoner, of Newport, and her fiance, John Drexel, of Philadelphia, came down for the party. Others present from New York and Philadelphia included the Misses Grace Cutting, Beatrice Goelet, Diana Lanier, Ann Norris, Amy Russell and Ruth Robb, of Boston. The men from out of town were Beverly Bogert, jr., William Bodine, Alfred Coyle, R. Fulton Cutting III, James Hilton, Irving Kingsford, jr., William S. Moore, Opie Rhinelander II, James Russell, Frederick Rockefeller, Thomas Ridgeway, Henry McLean, Smith and George H. Warren III.

Another guest, Miss Betty Golsan, of Richmond, is staying with Mrs. Maddox over the week-end. Miss Muriel will go to Richmond to bow at the German there December 18.

Garretts to Give Party Tonight

Though the dance continued merrily until a late hour, by 6 o'clock this morning every last bit of smilax and flowers had been removed. This was so a crew of men could get in and redecorate the club for the ball which Mr. and Mrs. Garrett will give tonight for Miss Elaine Darlington.

Pretty Miss Maddox spends almost as much time in New York as in Washington. She will leave for there tomorrow and will be present at the glittering opening of the Metropolitan Opera on Monday evening. She will return here afterwards and the family expects to be at their home on Belmont Road until after New Year's, anyway.

Women's Groups Mark 20th Year of Suffrage

National Woman's Party to Hold Biennial Conclave Here Next Week End; Leader Reviews Work to Win Ballot for Sex

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor.

The Women's Centennial Congress held this week in New York City, and the biennial conclave of the National Woman's Party to be held here next week-end, mark the twentieth anniversary of woman suffrage with important gatherings of the two groups primarily responsible for passage of the Nineteenth Amendment, effective August 26, 1920.

The National Woman's Party which, during the suffrage campaign, added picketing to the more conservative programs and parades of the National American Woman's Suffrage Association headed by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, was not invited to the recent Women's Centennial Congress. Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, the chairman of the Woman's Party, attended the banquet on the opening night, however, and declared it was "incredible that our organization was not asked to participate in this celebration of activities of women."

With prison terms and hunger strikes as part of the history of their campaign, the members of the National Woman's Party claim credit for winning the victory for suffrage. Mrs. Wiley was one of those who went to jail and will wear, during the convention, the little pin bearing the design of the prison gate, which is the official emblem of the picketers who were jailed.

Judge Howorth Delegate To 1915 Convention

A member of the suffrage group led by Mrs. Catt was Judge Lucy Somerville Howorth of the Board of Veterans' Appeals, who has just returned from the Centennial Congress.

Judge Howorth recalls that she came to Washington from Randolph-Macon College in 1915, as president of the college women's suffrage organization to attend the suffrage convention at which Dr. Anna Howard Shaw resigned and Mrs. Catt was named to succeed her.

Judge Howorth's mother, Mrs. Nellie Nugent Somerville, of Greenville, Miss., was present also at that time as a national vice president of the Suffrage Association. She later was elected in 1923 from Washington County as the first woman to serve in the Mississippi Legislature. In 1931, Judge Howorth was elected to the Legislature from Hinds County.

If the enfranchisement of women had done nothing else than cause the transfer of polling places from saloons to schools, it would have accomplished much, Judge Howorth believes.

Senator Hattie Caraway said she was not actively engaged in the fight for woman suffrage.

"This was not because of the fact that I did not believe in it. I thought then, as I think now, that women are entitled to the right of suffrage because of equal intelligence, equal responsibility and, among other reasons, the fact that women are some of the largest property owners in the Nation.

Believes Results Proved Wisdom

"I think that results have proved the wisdom and benefit of granting to women the right to vote and to hold public office.

"My experience has been largely in the legislative field. Among the women who have served in legislative capacities, I do not believe that one has given evidence that she goes about these legislative duties with less honesty of purpose and understanding than other members. In the performance of their duties women are governed by the same rules and they truly represent all of the people in their States."

Miss Marguerite Wells, president of the National League of Women Voters, said that 20 years ago, when suffrage for women had been won, she thought the time had come when men and women could work together in political affairs.

"It was Carrie Chapman Catt, who converted me to other plans with those stirring words: 'I propose no marvel, merely the most natural, the most appropriate and the most patriotic memorial that could be suggested, a League of Women Voters, to finish the fight and to aid in the reconstruction of the Nation.'

"That was just after the war. Accordingly, the League of Women Voters went to work not only to stimulate voting but also to promote a more constant and more devoted attention to the maintenance of a democratic Government than it had, heretofore, been accorded. The League of Women Voters' contribution therefore as enfranchised voters, has been an addition to the electorate of thousands of women who, for no party purposes and in behalf of no special interest, have devoted themselves to fitting our Government, local, State and National, to the increased burdens that modern conditions have placed upon it.

"A more devoted citizenship is, therefore, the one outstanding achievement of our organization."

Women Voters Told of Adult Education Plan

Adult education from the standpoint of its practical value for the family and the community was discussed yesterday by speakers at the luncheon meeting of the department of government and education of the League of Women Voters. The meeting was held at the Taft House, with Mrs. William H. Savin, temporary chairman, presiding.

W. H. Morris, director of the adult education program of the District WPA, urged that a broad interpretation be given the term "education." It is more than learning the fundamentals, he said, and embraces anything that helps an individual to grow.

The objective of the WPA program is to reach spots that could not be reached by the regular educational system, he explained. One example was that of a colored section in the city where a project was organized on a community basis with everything from music to roof mending included. Another was the plan for the Home for the Aged at Blue Plains, where the residents are to be taught handwork. The rehabilitation of persons is one of the chief aims of the program, he pointed out. A sixth of the time is spent in teaching the instructors who carry on the program.

He showed the readers used in classes for illiterate adults, illustrated like a first grade primer. New texts are soon to be issued for more advanced classes in reading, he said.

Mrs. Ola D. Rush, supervisor of home economics in the District, explained the adult education projects being carried on under the George-Dean Act. There are home economics classes in the schools and outside classes in child development, clothing diet and many other home economics subjects, she said.

Miss Maud Aiton, principal of the Americanization school, stressed the need for bringing to the adult a satisfaction in achievement and enriching his life through what he learned.

E. J. Lockwood described the night school program in the city school system.

Mrs. M. O. Lorenz, the league president, announced the appointment of Mrs. Francis M. Walters as chairman of the department of government and education, of which Mrs. Savin has been the acting head until a regular chairman could be appointed for the season.

'Cousin Mary Mason' Sends Gold-Engraved Plates as Invitations to Anniversary Fete

SOMETHING NEW in invitations was the plate, engraved in gold, received by friends of "Cousin Mary Mason," inviting them to a luncheon next Wednesday at 1 o'clock in the Cosmos room of the Carlton Hotel in celebration of her fifth year with the WRC Home Forum of the National Broadcasting Co.

Washingtonians are used to being summoned by telegram to affairs for stage and radio stars. Invitations engraved in gold and delivered by hand are no novelty. Minute cards that are sent through the mail and tuck themselves inconspicuously under magazine wrappers or in among larger letters are lost and found every day, but having invitations served on "golden platters" is something different.

Congratulations to "Cousin Mary" on her anniversary, the coming party and the fun everybody has had over the invitations.

Miss King will address a woman's club group in Richmond, Va., December 17 and from there will go to Indianapolis to visit relatives and speak before several women's organizations. Next Saturday, she will be one of the authors attending the Book Fair at the King-Smith Studio.

Willkie Scorns Warmonger Charge

Urges Continued Aid to Britain To Preserve Freedom

By the United Press

New York, Nov. 29.—Wendell L. Willkie, defeated Republican Presidential candidate, said tonight that "we must continue to help the fighting men of Britain to preserve that rim of freedom that is gradually shrinking and that eventually will shrink to our own shores."

Willkie said he did not believe that a man should be called a warmonger because he advocated aid to Britain or a fifth columnist because he believed that we should defend only our own shores.

Interrupting a Florida vacation to fly here from West Palm Beach, he addressed 3,500 people gathered for the Thirty-sixth Annual National Interfraternity Conference.

He said that the democratic process of living depended upon the right to carry on discussions on matters concerning public problems and that democratic processes could function only if the channels of public discussion were kept open and free of vilification.

In the last Presidential campaign, he said, men and women involved in the outcome of the election indulged in "vilification" and "personal arguments" that did not change any votes. He said that the only result of such tactics was to reduce the stature of the men and women involved in the estimation of the American people.

He ended his speech by bringing his audience of 3,600 persons to their feet in a toast to "the health and happiness of the President of the United States."

D.C. Symphony Is Off Today on Northern Tour

Concert Tomorrow In Springfield, Mass., To Open 13-Day Jaunt

The National Symphony Orchestra, directed by Hans Kindler, will leave Union Station at 1:15 p. m. today for a 13-day concert tour which will take it as far north as Ottawa and Hamilton, Canada.

It will give concerts in 11 cities, the first being tomorrow in Springfield, Mass.

Later concerts include: Norwich, Conn., December 2; Hartford, Conn., December 3; Ottawa, Ontario, December 4; Hamilton, Ontario, December 5; Erie, Pa., December 6; Oneonta, N. Y., December 7; Syracuse, N. Y., December 9; Olean, N. Y., December 10; Corning, N. Y., December 11; Elmira, N. Y., December 12.

In Erie, Oneonta and Corning, the National Symphony is making its first appearance. Other concerts are in cities where the orchestra has appeared from three to six times. This year's appearances in Ottawa and Hamilton mark the fourth visit of the orchestra to Canada, where it has been greeted in the press as an "ambassador of musical good will."

The next Washington concerts of the National Symphony will be played December 13 and 15. Soloist on the latter concert will be Joseph Szigeti, Hungarian violinist.

Chief of Staff Marshall Calls for Curb on Rent Rise

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, last night called on the public to keep "persons of questionable character" away from Army concentration points and to curb "profiteering" in rents on housing for officers' families.

In a radio talk on the progress of the defense program, Gen. Marshall charged that "establishments for the purpose of selling liquor are becoming increasingly active in the communities adjacent to the camps, and in some communities there has been an influx of persons of questionable reputation."

Cites Rising Rents

"Here," he said, "we have on the one side a sordid business for the accumulation of money, and on the other the interest of every parent who has a son in the Army . . . This situation must be brought under control before it grows serious."

He declared the Army had found that in some localities rents at first doubled and then tripled.

"This situation is unfortunate and very unfair," he added, "and I can only hope that State and municipal authorities will bring sufficient pressure to bear to suppress this form of profiteering."

500,000 Now in Training

Reviewing the defense program, he said that in contrast to the 170,000 soldiers, 56 squadrons of combat planes and some 2,500 pilots comprising the active Army a year ago, "today there are 500,000 men in the field undergoing intensive training, and within a very few weeks this total will approach 800,000."

"Instead of three incomplete infantry divisions, there are today 18 under training, with nine more soon to come," he said. "The two weak mechanized regiments have grown into armored corps of two divisions, each about 12,000 men. One cavalry division has had its missing units organized and is rapidly approaching a war strength of about 12,000 men with a second division in process of activation. Five partially organized antiaircraft regiments on active duty in July a year ago have been increased to 22 complete regiments in the field training at the present time, with more to report in January."

'World's Fastest' Bomber Tested

Baltimore, Nov. 29. (AP).—The Army's newest bomber, the Martin-built B-26, tried its wings for the first time today at the Glenn L. Martin Aircraft Company. Martin engineers said it would be proven the world's fastest bomber.

The bomber is understood to be capable of a speed of 400 miles an hour. Heavily-armed, the plane will carry a crew of five.

Man, 80, Braves Fire—He Had Money to Burn

Eighty-year-old Edward Hall, colored, stood shivering behind the police lines watching flames envelope his home at 115 H Street Southeast last night. Suddenly he pushed through the crowd and slipped unobserved back into his home.

When firemen made a final trip through the houses at 111, 113 and 115 H Street, which had been damaged by the fire, they found Hall unconscious on the floor of his bedroom. He was revived and taken to Providence Hospital.

Wondering why he had returned to the house, police searched the bedroom.

Hidden in drawers, in the mattress, in paper packages, they found a $100 bill, handfuls of $20, $10 and $5 bills. The total was $3,502.

Today Lieut. Gimmel Desch, of the Fifth Precint, will return the money to Hall and, incidentally, try to interest him in a bank account.

Returning RAF Bombers Get Royal Welcome

King Visits Station, Hears First-Hand Of Raid on Reich

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

London, Nov. 29.—The first crew back from a raid on Berlin entered the brightly-lit intelligence room of an R. A. F. bomber station soon after midnight.

As the young sergeant pilot led them, as usual, toward the senior intelligence officer and saluted, he saw that one member of the group standing around him was the King.

But he made his report in the matter-of-fact tone he would have used on any other occasion. The King shook hands with the sergeant pilot and asked him how he got home.

"We found a lot of clouds, but we had a bit of good luck," the pilot replied. "There was a break in the clouds at the right moment and I could see our objective, a railway station, very clearly just as we dropped our bombs."

The first crew back from a raid on Cologne entered the room to report, not expecting to find Air Marshal Sir Richard Peirse, commander in chief of the bomber command, Air Vice Marshal J. E. A. Baldwin, A. O. C., of the group, and the King helping in the examination.

Was It Noisy?

"Were you able to drop your bombs on the target?" asked the King of the squadron leader. "Yes, sir. The weather wasn't good and we had nine-tenths clouds. But I managed to pick up a bend in the Rhine which gave me my direction, and I unloaded my bombs on the marshalling yards."

"Was there much noise?" the King asked; "much opposition?"

The squadron leader grinned. "Well, Sir. Jerry is still playing foxy. There were no searchlights, until I dropped my bombs. Then 14 or 15 lights came on, making a cone in the sky, and they chucked everything up to the apex of the cone."

Earlier the King had heard crews being "briefed" for the raids. He strolled into the "briefing" room. The pilots and crews were being told, "your target is not an easy one to find. . . . "photographers of recent raids interested the King in the intelligence room.

When he asked about air crews. Air Marshal Peirse told him that the R. A. F. is expanding so rapidly that though recruiting for crews is going on very well, there is room for many more men. The King walked on the control tower where he saw a heavily laden Wellington take off for Germany.

Hears Some Plain Words

He saw the green flash which means "all clear," heard the engines roar and saw the great black planes air borne, one by one.

In the operations room he heard the planes get their "fixes" (check of position and course).

He laughed when, through the loudspeaker, came the voice of a bomber pilot about to take off—cursing his rear gunner freely for not answering when he checked over the wireless telephony points.

In the sergeants' mess, the station warrant officer told him they would feel honored if he would have a drink with them.

"I would like to," said the King, and drank a good luck to the sergeants in whisky and soda. The King spent the whole night at the station.

Army to Add Colored Units, Hastie Says

13 Regiments, 9 Air Squadrons Planned, D. C. Parley Told

Thirteen regiments and nine Army Air Corps squadrons will be added to the colored branches of the Nation's armed forces, Dean William Hastie civilian aid to Secretary of War Stimson, last night told a conference on colored participation in the national defense program at the Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A.

Hastie said the additions will be made in 1941, supplementing the present Ninth and Tenth Cavalry, the Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth Infantry and the Forty-seventh and Forty-eighth Quartermaster regiments.

Five Coast Artillery regiments (principally antiaircraft) will be formed, he said, including the Seventy-sixth and Seventy-seventh Regiments. With colored National Guard regiments brought to full war strength, the present total of 13,000 colored soldiers will be raised to about 80,000 and the additions will include these organizations, Hastie said:

The 349th Field Artillery Regiment, now organized, and three similar regiments authorized; the Forty-first Engineer Regiment, now organized, and one other such regiment. Also two additional quartermaster regiments have been authorized, to be scattered about in small units at various camps, posts, fields and depots. In the Air Corps nine scattered squadrons have been planned from among colored selectees.

Stationed at Fort Bragg, N. C., approximately 6,000 will be in the coast artillery; a similar number will be at Fort Livingston, La., in seven field artillery regiments and an engineer battalion; two infantry regiments at Fort Huachuca, Ariz.; various coast artillery regiments at Wilmington, N. C.; two cavalry units at Fort Riley, Kans.; single regiments at Fort Devens, Mass; Fort Dix, N. J.; Camp Custer, Mich.; Fort Ontario, N. Y.; Fort Sill, Okla.; Fort Claiborne, La., and at Galveston, Tex.

Colored officers have been planned so far for only in the three regiments of National Guard now organized, and in one other such regiment to be organized, Hastie reported. No racial policy concerning other regiments has yet been announced by the War Department.

Dr. Charles H. Houston outlined for the conference its procedure for forthcoming weeks. He said conference demands included all ratings and asignments to be made on merit; a fair share of appointments of colored youth as midshipmen at the Naval Academy and fair treatment for colored youths appointed to the Naval Academy.

Meeting in the parish hall at Tenth Street and Independence Avenue Southwest, the guests heard greetings from Dr. E. C. Beery, superintendent of the East Washington Methodist district; A. G. Page, chairman of the Marvin official board, and members of other organizations of the congregation.

Dr. Warner, who served for 30 years as district Methodist superintendent of the metropolitan area of Bombay, India, was accompanied at the reception by Mrs. Warner; their son and daughter-in-law, L. Harold Warner, of Takoma Park, and a daughter, Margaret Elizabeth, student at the Woman's Medical College, Philadelphia. Two sons were not present—John Robertson, student at Virginia Military Institute, and Ariel Jackson Warner, student at Western Maryland College.

Mrs. C. J. Smyth Dies in Detroit

Mrs. Katherine Murphy Smyth, 75, widow of Constantine J. Smyth, who was chief justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District, died Thursday in Detroit, Mich., friends in Washington learned yesterday.

Justice Smyth died in 1924 and Mrs. Smyth has been living in Detroit with her daughter, Mrs. Charles W. Burgess, for the last five years. A native of Beachwood, Ky., she came to Washington in 1917. She will be buried in Omaha.

Survivors include two sons, Bernard Smyth, of Washington, and Constantine Smyth, of Philadelphia, and a second daughter, Mrs. Rose Sibbernson, of Omaha.

Washington's Yale Alumni To 'Go Rotarian'

Washington's Yale alumni will "go Rotarian," at least to the extent of wearing name cards in their lapels at luncheons and other meetings of the Yale Club of Washington. This was decided yesterday by 16 officers, directors, and committee members of the club, at a luncheon held at the University Club.

Richard Griswold, Yale Club treasurer, wore one of the proposed badges with his name and class printed in letters half an inch high—"so no one will have to squint to read it." Purpose of the badges is to lessen formality and increase conversation among Yale Club members who have not seen each other at college.

The club officials at yesterday's luncheon also authorized the preparation of a directory of members, which will list all Washingtonians who are members in good standing, with their occupations, addresses, and phone numbers. Plans were made for a luncheon during the holidays for Yale undergraduates who live in Washington.

Capital News In Brief

Purse Snatchers Rob 3 D. C. Women of $28.50

Three Washington women were robbed of a total of $28.50 in purse snatchings reported to police last night.

Ruth Jenkins, who lives at the Y. W. C. A. residence, 235 Second Street Northeast was held up near the Folger Library by a colored man, who after taking her purse containing $6, escaped in an automobile.

Pearl Stein, of 1885 Irving Street Northwest, under similar circumstances, lost $16.50 near Seventeenth and Kenyon Streets Northwest.

Grace Townsend, of 1423 Webster Street Northwest, was robbed of her purse containing $6 and several valuables at 1213 Thirteenth Street Northwest.

Maybe It Was Just the Principle of the Thing

Justice James W. Morris, of the District Court, yesterday sent William Walker and Eddie Johnson, 23, colored, to prison for one to three years for robbery. They were convicted of taking a pocketbook from James W. Callan, Alexandria, rifling it of $250 and fleeing to North Carolina.

After what happened during the trial, the men may regard the prison sentence as a minor tribulation.

"Did you know," asked Assistant District Attorney Cecil R. Heflin on cross-examination, "that there were three $1,000 bills in another pocket of the wallet?"

Johnson promptly fainted.

Courts May Get Street Car Request

Capital Transit Co. officials last night indicated they might ask the courts for permission to convert 15 streetcars for one-man operation. This request has been denied twice by the Public Utilities Commission.

E. D. Merrill, president of the transit company, said the board of directors had not decided definitely on their course of action, but that a court case was a "possibility."

Diplomatic Immunity Saves Chauffeur Fine

An American citizen employed by a foreign legation yesterday found he had diplomatic immunity—at least as long as he's driving the boss' car.

Herman Brannum, colored chauffeur of a car owned by the Honduras Legation, had the automobile parked in a "no parking" space in front of a department store at Eighth Street and Market Space Northwest, when a policeman asked him to move on. Brannum pointed to his diplomatic credentials and said he didn't have to.

At First Precinct Station Brannum was formally charged with "parking in entrance." Later his claim of immunity was checked, and the charge was inked out.

Right Diet—and They Do Mean Bulbs

A new menu has become fashionable among the fakirs of India, Lawrence Thaw, world traveler and writer, said last night at Constitution Hall.

Speaking before 3,500 members of the National Geographic Society, Thaw described and illustrated with colored pictures how some fakirs at Benares have abandoned many of their money-luring acts of deforming themselves and lying on beds of spikes and have taken up the art of eating electric light bulbs and safety-razor blades.

The fakirs and their queer ideas of digestion were features of a lecture that covered a journey through India by motor caravan of about 9,000 miles in five months. Thaw went tiger hunting in Butan, photographed the beauty of the Taj Mahal in Agra and many of the historic temples and places of India.

Commissioners to Meet 3 Times a Week

The Commissioners hereafter will meet three times a week instead of bi-weekly, they decided yesterday.

"Too much work piles up," was the reason advanced by the city fathers.

Meetings have been held on Tuesday and Friday mornings. Hereafter the board will meet Monday at 2 p. m., Wednesday and Friday at 10 a. m. The meetings will continue to be executive sessions.

Editor of Miners' Journal Has Stroke

Ellis Searles, veteran editor of the United Mine Workers Journal, suffered a slight stroke yesterday at his office at the union's headquarters, Fifteenth and I Streets Northwest.

At his home at the Wardman Park Hotel, members of his family reported that his condition was not serious. Searles has been editor of the United Mine Workers Journal since 1918.

Root Succeeds Gillen as Park Head

Irving C. Root, chief engineer of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission since it was founded in 1927, is the new superintendent of Washington's park system.

Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes made the announcement yesterday, ending months of speculation on the $6,500 appointment.

Root, a resident of Chevy Chase, Md., was one of 200 persons from all parts of the country who took a special civil service examination for the post earlier this year. He succeeds Francis F. Gillen.

French Service

"Le Sens de la Vie" will be the sermon topic of the Rev. Andre F. Liotard at the French service at St. John's Episcopal Church tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. Monday evening the French congregation, of which Mr. Liotard is pastor, will give him a reception in St. John's parish hall, in honor of his recent return from a year's service with the French military forces, most of the time in Turkey.

Property Tax Exemptions Face Inquiry

Commissioners Believe Some Waivers Are Illegal; D. C. Loses 2 Million

A thorough probe of tax-exempt privately owned property, valued at $111,794,179, was ordered yesterday by the Commissioners.

A report given them by Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent reveals the District each year waives about $2,000,000 in real estate taxes. This figure represents 9 per cent of the total real estate bill and the city heads are of the firm opinion at least 11 per cent of property exempted is not entitled to receive this special privilege from the District.

The report lists about 2,000 properties which are on the exemption list. Each property will be thoroughly investigated by a special committee, the Commissioners said.

Citizens Groups Complain

Origin of the study is with the local citizens' associations who, for many years, have complained to the Commissioners against the amount of exemptions from the District realty tax.

The special committee probably will include representatives from the offices of the assessor, corporation counsel and possibly the collector's office.

For the most part properties listed by Dent as tax exempt were owned by eleemosynary institutions, churches, public libraries and educational institutions not operated for financial gain. The Commissioners, it is understood, order tax exemptions to organizations which provide services to the public which otherwise would be a burden to the municipal government.

Loss of $1,956,401

Total amount of area occupied by the institutions granted exemption from the tax is 69,498,439 square feet. The land had an assessed value of $33,281,263 for this present fiscal year and the improvements $78,512,916.

Dent said at the present realty tax rate of $1.75 per $100 of value, the tax loss to the District amounted to $1,956,401. The total taxable properties in the District amounts to $1,238,000,000.

Six Policemen Promoted, One Stepped Down

Patrolwoman Put On Retirement List Because of Health

Promotions of five privates and one precinct detective, demotion of one precinct detective and the retirement of a policewoman were approved by the Commissioners last night.

BEHAN

Precinct Detective John B. Behan, jr., aide to the Commissioners, was promoted to the rank of detective sergeant to fill a vacancy left by the retirement of Detective Sergt. Walter S. Beck. He will continue with his present assignment.

George H. Wilson, Fourth Precinct detective, was demoted to the uniformed ranks "for the good of the service." His place was ordered filed by Joe M. Bell, 43.

Other privates named precinct detectives were Roland W. Valentine, colored, 45, Thirteenth Precinct; Harold E. Moore, 34; Sixth Precinct; Horace E. Caranfa, 31; homicide squad, and Albert W. Clayton, 33, chief clerk's office.

The Commissioners ordered Miss Helen Stansberger, 44, veteran policewoman, retired because of physical disability. Appointed to the force in January, 1922, Miss Stansberger was injured when knocked down by a taxicab two years ago. She never fully recovered from her injuries. She lives at 1954 Columbia Road Northwest.

CARANFA

Behan was appointed to the force in 1935 and worked on Lieut. Earl P. Hartman's vice squad before being made a precinct detective and assigned to the Commissioner's office in 1939. He is a member of the District bar and will receive an additional $360 annually in his new rank.

The precinct detectives will receive salary increases of $240 a year.

MEMENTO—Mrs. Edward H. Purden, wife of the president of the Washington Federation of Churches, pins a rose on Dr. William L. Darby, retiring secretary of the federation

Those who know Dr. W. L. (Will) Darby best last night gave a testimonial dinner to the retiring Federation of Churches executive secretary, toasted his sixty-fifth birthday, and lauded his efforts toward cooperative Christianity.

From the time Dr. and Mrs. Darby entered the library room of the Federation Building at 1749-51 N Street Northwest to the vocal salute of "Happy Birthday to You," until the dinner broke up with "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," the city's clerical and lay leaders uttered tributes to the secretary, who officially retires today.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, who with Dr. Ze Barney Phillips, Epiphany rector and Senate chaplain, represented the Episcopal denomination, recalled having known Dr. Darby since he became federation secretary 18 years ago, and said "he has exercised his office with rare tact, judgment and good taste."

Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, federation president and First Baptist pastor, read greetings from the District of Columbia Organized Bible Class Association, the District of Columbia Baptist Convention and other groups and also telegrams of regret at being absent from several clergymen.

A resolution from the Washington Ministerial Union, read by Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, Foundry Methodist pastor, declared that Dr. Darby's retirement "removes a familiar and greatly beloved figure from our official ecclesiastical picture in Washington."

Responding, Dr. Darby said the credit for bringing the federation to the forefront belonged to the cooperating church groups, and assured of his happiness in "giving years to the enterprise." He praised his helpmate, Mrs. Darby, who also spoke briefly, emphasizing that church work is the "greatest work" that women can do for this country.

Dr. Smith Challenges 400 Students to 'March for Christ'

More than 400 college students from Maryland and Washington were challenged last night by Dr. Luther Wesley Smith to be "on the march" for Christ in today's critical times.

Addressing the opening dinner of the D. C.-Maryland Baptist Student Union Convention at Calvary Baptist Church, he pictured youth of Germany, Russia and Italy "on the march" for what they believed was right politically, and urged his youthful hearers to "march on" enthusiastically for the Christian cause.

Executive secretary of the American Baptist Student Publication Society of Philadelphia, he spoke after a welcome to the delegates from Dr. William S. Abernethy, pastor of the host church, and also greetings from Prof. Raymond Seeger, of the George Washington University faculty; Howard Rees, Student Union secretary, and others.

Mrs. James Yaden, president of the District of Columbia Woman's Missionary Union, presided. Haley Scurlock was toastmaster. The Wilson Teachers' College quartette sang.

Hillsdale Civic Association Seeks Many Improvements

This is the sixty-second article in a series about associations of citizens in the District.

The Hillsdale Civic Association was organized about 1905, according to J. Henry Dale, president, of 1145 Sumner Road Southeast.

DALE

It serves a Southeast area bounded by Talbert Street to St. Elizabeths Hospital and Douglas Road to Bolling Field, east of the Anacostia River.

Present aims of the association are to obtain a storm sewer to dispose of water draining off St. Elizabeths Hospital grounds on Sheridan Road; hard-surfacing of Stevens Road, and catch basins at Sheridan and Pomeroy Roads Southeast.

Members also hope to obtain a swimming pool for the Barry Farms Playground and to have a fence erected around the grounds.

Meetings are held on the second Friday of each month in the Birney School at 2429 Nichols Avenue Southeast. Efforts in the past have helped to bring about paving all but one of the roads in the sector, Dale said.

Improvements are being sought in the area's schools, but no new schools, playgrounds or libraries are needed at present, he added. Members have gone on record as favoring suffrage for the District.

Officers include Dale; Henry Sayles, vice president; Dorothy Sayles, his wife, corresponding secretary; Louise Dale, recording secretary; Gladys McKenzie, treasurer, and the Rev. C. B. Ashton, chaplain.

Delegates to the Federation of Civic Associations are: Henry Sayles, Miss E. V. Smith, Albert Watson, Robert Mason, and Dale.

Retail Sales $402,768,000 Here in '39

Census Report Also Shows Big Increase In Business, Pay Rolls in 10 Years

Announcing total retail sales of $402,768,000 in the District in 1939 the Census Bureau yesterday made public figures which draw a picture of Washington's retail trade growth during the last ten years. The total sales figure is an increase of 22 per cent over 1935 and 21 per cent better than the dollar volume reached in 1929.

The figures show substantial gains in sales, pay rolls and in the number of employes. While the number of stores has increased 19 per cent in the District since 1929, there has been no material change in the number of food stores throughout the ten-year period. All figures are based on returns from the 1940 census.

Compared with population growth of 176,284, or 36.2 per cent since 1929, the number of stores increased 1,078, or 19 per cent. A total of 6,893 retail stores was listed in Washington in 1939.

More Variety Stores

Variety stores in the general merchandising group are reported to have increased 65 per cent in number and 60 per cent in sales since 1935. Department stores report sales 16 per cent higher than in 1935 and 26 per cent higher than in 1929. Smaller stores, classified as dry goods and general merchandise shops, have lost 21 per cent in number and 22 per cent in sales since 1929.

Apparel stores show gains of 13 per cent in number and 15 per cent in sales since 1935, while shoe stores show little change in sales since 1929. The furniture-household-radio group is 45 per cent over 1935, but is still 10 per cent under their 1929 volume.

The automotive group—vehicle dealers and auto supply stores—increased 13 per cent over 1935 and 19 per cent over 1929.

There are nearly twice as many filling stations and more than three times as many proprietors as ten years ago who do 60 per cent more business. Employment is up 111 per cent and pay roll 76 per cent higher than in 1929.

Lumber Sales Gain

The lumber-building group gained 31 per cent in sales since 1935 and is 31 per cent above its 1929 dollar volume. Hardware stores report sales up 54 per cent over 1935, but 63 per cent below the dollar volume reached in 1929.

Eating places, with a 9 per cent gain in number, increased 20 per cent in sales since 1935. Drinking places, many of which also serve meals, increased 31 per cent in number and 32 per cent in sales during the last four years. The combined sales of eating and drinking places total $34,364,000 in 1939 in comparison with $18,549,000 for eating places in 1929 when liquor sales were prohibited. Packaged liquor stores add another $11,923,000 of sales, an increase of 45 per cent over 1935.

Drug stores increased 18 per cent in number and 27 per cent in sales, and are 48 per cent above their 1929 record.

Gain in Employes

Fuel, ice and fuel oil dealers show no change in number since 1935, but a gain of 100 per cent in number and 13 per cent in sales since 1929.

Retail store employes in the District increased in number from 41,675 in 1935 to 48,072 in 1939, a gain of 15 per cent. The total is 42 per cent more than the number employed in 1929. Pay roll increased from $43,473,000 in 1935 to $56,007,000, or 29 per cent.

There are 10,644 more full-time and 3,622 more part-time employes than were working in retail stores in 1929, and their pay roll is 29 per cent higher than it was ten years ago. Pay roll includes wages, salaries, sales commissions and bonuses.

Cave-in Kills WPA Workers

ONE OUT OF THREE SURVIVES—Cave-in of a 9-foot sewer trench at Fort Myer, Va., yesterday buried three WPA laborers alive, killed two before they could be uncovered, seriously injured the third. Rescuers are shown lifting Clarence Milton (arrow), the injured men, from excavation. Two men killed were William McGee, 60, colored, 1845 Ninth Street Northwest, and Hivey Brown, 30, 4210 Dix Street Northwest. Milton, who lives in Alexandria, was reported in serious condition in the Fort Myer Post Hospital

Girl, 19, and Long-Lost Father Thrilled as Reunion Nears

All the suspense that 19-year-old Mrs. Lola King Stogeberg, of Denver, Colo., has known during a five-year search for a father she had never seen, promises to be exceeded in two days in New York beginning Monday.

On that day she and her father will arrive in the big town, but neither may see the other until 9 p. m. Tuesday before a microphone of the Columbia Broadcasting Co. At that time Mrs. Stogeberg and Robert E. King, of 3038 O Street Northwest, Washington, will see each other and speak to each other for the first time in their lives.

It was only under such circumstances that they could arrange to meet each other at all. For neither had enough money to travel to the other's home. They learned about each other through the good offices of Police Chief E. L. Moses, of Luray, Va.

The story of how Chief Moses traced King by means of a marriage license issued in New York in 1920 was told in The Post on November 19. Lola had discovered when she was 14 years old that the stepfather with whom she lived was not her real father. She had learned, furthermore, that her real father and her mother had separated shortly before she was born, and the latter had died when she was 4.

Diligent inquiry revealed her real father's name, and the fact that he was born in Page County, Va. With only this amount of information, Chief Moses instituted a thorough search, which resulted in the discovery of the Washington man. The latter meanwhile had remarried and is the father of two children. His whole family now is eager to see the half-sister of whom they had never heard.

The Post's story came to the attention of the broadcasting company, and by telephone to Denver and Washington the offer was made to bring them to New York to appear on a broadcast of "We the People." The only condition that was imposed was that they should meet for the first time on the broadcast. Both accepted with alacrity, but yesterday King was full of suspense. And he hasn't the faintest idea what he will manage to say.

Horsecar Era in D. C. Described At Worcester Alumni Session

The old Washington of horse-drawn streetcars, arc lights on Pennsylvania Avenue and brick-paved streets were recalled last night by two charter members at the fiftieth anniversary meeting of the Washington Chapter of the Worcester Polytechnic Institute Alumni Association.

Before nearly 100 District alumni of the New England engineering college, John F. MacNab, of 3235 Quesada Street Northwest, and Henry W. Carter, of Toledo, Ohio, told of the first meeting of the alumni chapter half a century ago. Carter was first president of the organization and came from Toledo for the celebration.

Also here for the banquet anniversary celebration, held in the Dodge Hotel, were Admiral Wat Tyler Cluverius, president of the institute; Harry B. Lindsay, president of the national alumni association and Herbert F. Taylor, secretary of the association at Worcester, Mass., as well as representatives from alumni chapters from all parts of the country.

The Washington Chapter was the first of the Worcester alumni groups to be formed, it was recalled by Zelotes W. Coombs, professor emeritus of the college since his retirement three years ago.

Presiding at the anniversary ceremonies was Harold T. Cutler, president of the Washington Chapter. Dean Frederick M. Feiker, of the George Washington University School of Engineering and a Worcester alumnus, acted as toastmaster.

Alumni President Lindsey called the District unit "wonderfully active in its work from this central and focal point."

Eklund's Plea Not Guilty In Sniping

Suspect's Lawyer Investigates Report Police Eavesdropped With Dictograph

Investigation of reports that the police eavesdropped on conferences between James E. Eklund, 25, and a lawyer, was started by James R. Kirkland, attorney, after Eklund pleaded not guilty to indictments for three murders yesterday.

Eklund, a former engineering student who has been in prison for housebreaking, is accused of killing three colored men here last month.

"The police have handled this case in an unusual manner," Kirkland told District Justice F. Dickinson Letts in asking three weeks to make the investigation.

Justice Letts ruled that for the time being he would allow Kirkland only the customary five days in which to file further pleas before the case was liable to be set down for trial.

Pleading that his client not be condemned without trial, Kirkland, a former prosecutor, said "this is the first time in my 31 years at the bar that the police have openly declared an accused person is guilty before he has been tried."

Kirkland cited disclosures in The Post last week of reports that the police planted a dictograph in a room in which Eklund conferred with another lawyer and listened to their conversation. Such a thing would be a gross violation of a prisoner's constitutional rights, Kirkland asserted.

"I cannot say to your honor whether that charge is true," Kirkland commented, "but I can say that I have accomplished more in preparing this case in two days that my client has been in jail than in the five days he was held by the police."

District Attorney Edward M. Curran objected to giving Kirkland three weeks to investigate, but said he would not object if the delay was used to prepare for trial.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Meeting in Barker Hall, the Friday Morning Music Club presents Doris Sturgeon, violin, and Eloise Cunningham, piano, in a sonata by Oskar Nedbal; Mary Russell Williams, soprano, and Mabel Frost, piano, in songs by Proch, Granados and Rimski-Korsakov, and Constance Russell, piano, in pieces by Chopin and Ravel.

Members and guests of the Friday Morning Music Club heard a novel program yesterday when Doris Sturgeon and Eloise Cunningham played a violin and piano sonata by Oskar Nedbal, little of whose music has found its way into our concert halls. An early work of this composer, the sonata definitely belongs in the romantic period and in the Schumann-Mendelssohn style. Neatly constructed and harmonically consonant, the music has genuinely poetic quality and emotional power. Nedbal (1874-1930) was a pupil of Dvorak and in his youth played viola with the Czech String Quartet. After composing considerable absolute music, he turned to the writing of operettas and ballets. His greatest influence was exercised as an orchestral conductor in Prag and Vienna, where he was highly esteemed.

Mary Russell Williams, whose light soprano voice has delightful delicacies and inflections, began a group of songs with the "Theme and Variations" which Heinrich Proch devised specifically for experts in fioriture. Proch was the teacher of such eminent operatic singers as Amalie Materna, Therese Tietjens and Minna Peschka-Leutner, and he planned the variations as a test piece for flexibility and for accuracy in staccati, roulades and trills. Miss Williams encompassed them all with grace and skill, although not invariably with complete control of breath.

The fine shading of her voice and the purity of its intonation were further disclosed in Rimski-Korsakov's "The Rose and the Nightingale" and Granados' "Quejas o la maja y el ruisenor." In these songs she showed a most promising ability in florid phrasing and in nuances of tone, attaining a pianissimo of exquisite attenuation.

Constance Russell closed the program with admirable performances of Chopin's G minor ballade and Ravel's "Alborado del Gracioso." Her fleet technique and dynamic control were adjutant to her artistic instinct in interpretation. It was evident that the miniature grand piano used was a limitation upon her resources.

And in His Spare Time He Might Make Bricks!

A Versatile Fellow Composes a Picture Score; Bert Lahr Fools Some of Them All the Time; This, That and the Other About the Theater

AN ALSATIAN BY BIRTH, his closest friend in Paris, some 16 years or more ago, was the then equally unknown Ernest Hemingway. They practically starved together. Hemingway, as yet unpublished, taught boxing for a living. This other fellow, unable to obtain engagements as a concert pianist or conductor, gave piano lessons as a reason for his one square a day and a place to sleep.

BELL

Whether through life-long friendship with Ambassador William Bullitt or his association with government agents, through his late brother in the diplomatic service, he gained a penetrating insight into conditions abroad. That his information had a basis in fact was revealed in June of last year, when he wrote an article for Esquire that predicted the course of World War II with astonishing accuracy. He has completed another book, published by Longmans-Green, titled "The Shape of the War to Come," that makes still more amazing revelations.

He has another accomplishment which he calls his hobby. He is an acknowledged authority on criminology. His "Study of Glandular Criminology," published in 1937, is a standard textbook at Northwestern University and the University of Southern California.

Of course, he's a horticulturist of note, flies his own plane, speaks and reads several languages and is as much at home in jazz music as in classical, but he's still only a single individual — a shade on the multiple-threat side, perhaps, but still only one guy.

No, we are not talking about Superman, who spreads his omnipotence across the comic pages of The Post. We are talking about George Antheil, who composed the musical accompaniment for Ben Hecht's epic of the gutters, "Angels Over Broadway," now on view at the Metropolitan.

Y'oughtta see it.

If you have ever been down around that section of the docks, you will discover that Director Tay Garnett has created a pretty authentic atmosphere for Marlene Dietrich's "Seven Sinners," now bowling the boys over at RKO-Keith's. The keen of eye also will note that he has brought back a lot of old-timers in his cast—Richard Carle, Reginald Denny, Vince Barnett and several more. At one point, who should bob up briefly but Antonio Moreno. Remember him? And if you must have a thumbnail sketch of the character of Bijou, played by the Dietrich, it might be dug out of the fact that "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby" becomes her theme number in the musical background of the picture, immediately she has sung it. "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," sort of.

Whether the tip is belated or not, exclusive pictures of the Washington Redskins-New York Giants football game, and ditto of the Georgetown-George Washington game, are now a part of the screen bill at Roland Robbins' Trans-Lux Theater. These, of course, are over and above the regular features.

Bert Lahr, star of "DuBarry Was a Lady," standing them up to the limit of the theater's capacity at the National, is by way of being a bit of an artist. Have him tell you sometime what a gruelling job it is to make a fake fumble seem real—and we are not talking about football. It seems that the song he sings with Frances Williams in the first act, "But in the Morning, No!," wasn't going so well, at first. It was laying such an egg, indeed, that he appealed to Cole Porter to write a new number to take its place. Then one night he got tangled up in his lyrics and got such a laugh that it was kept in and the song became one of the hits of the show. That "keeping it in" required more rehearsal than all the rest of the score put together—and it still fools most of the people all of the time, including some who should know better.

So now they've changed it back. Which is to say that having worked up a fine head of steam over the title of "Virginia," when that Madeleine Carroll-Fred MacMurray romance was being filmed down in the nearby Old Dominion, Paramount finally concluded that "State" pictures weren't going so well and it had better be called "The Southerner." Then the howl went up. So "Virginia" again is "Virginia" and will be released to the trade as such.

The most feted visitors in town this week were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur DeTitta, back in the States from the European shambles for quite a spell now, but about to leave for Arthur's new post on the West Coast. He will be manager of the Fox Movietone News territory ranging up the Pacific from the Mexican to the Canadian boundary and as far east as Salt Lake City, with headquarters in Los Angeles. On the strength of past experience— their tales of the flight from Paris one leap ahead of the Nazis are thriller-dillers—Arthur and Helen are sure that hell will break loose in the Pacific the minute they get there. Sorry to have missed the Anthony Mutos' rout in their honor, but life is like that, so I hear.

Warner Brothers' circulating library of novels they have picturized has moved from the Earle Theater to the Metropolitan.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Cleveland, Nov. 29 (INS).—Richard Rowland wires me he has bought the most terrific yarn of the year—a sort of It tells the story from the beginning of the present war to date, through the eyes of an average English family living in Surrey. One son is an aviator, one a sailor and one a soldier—in fact, all members of the family contribute in a large way to the wonderful spirit that England is showing in fighting for her life today.

PARSONS

Rowland's story is titled "The Battle of Britain" and what particularly interests me is that many of the most dramatic events of the war will be recreated. It will show the evacuation of Dunkerque, the bombings of London and present day life in the bomb shelters. So far, there is no cast or director, but if this picture packs one half the terrific punch of "London Can Take It," it should be a box office sensation.

Now that R. K. O. was successful in getting Michele Morgan out of France they're trying to get Jean Gabin—who is to French fans what Gable-Taylor-and-Boyer combined are to American femmes. Miss Morgan and Jean made six pictures in France—and this isn't the first time one of our major studios has made an effort to bring him here. One of the difficulties in the past was that Gabin does not speak English—but Miss Morgan says he has been studying our language intently for the past year and, who knows, perhaps he will be as lucky as she was in arranging her visa.

Paramount and MGM are pouting. The trouble is that Para just announced the new title for "There's Always Juliet" will be "One Night In Lisbon" and not long ago Metro announced they had "Episode in Lisbon" for Bob Taylor and Hedy Lamarr. Both sides think there are "Too many Lisbons." What surprises me is how the sentimental little "There's Always Juliet" (originally set in London) ever happened to wind up in Lisbon, anyway.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The Lin Howards (Judith Barrett) welcomed an 8-ounce debutante at the Cedars of Lebanon, which means that Lin won his bet from his brother, Bob Howard, that their baby would arrive before Bob's and Andrea Leeds'; Deanna Durbin is the first of a number of big Hollywood stars to accept Joseph Schenck's invitation to go to Washington for the President's birthday ball. Joe is the vice chairman of the national foundation for infantile paralysis; Gene Raymond caught the streamliner last night for New York where he will meet Jeanette MacDonald.

Rudy Vallee winds up his personal appearing at Victor Hugo's sunday night and won't accept another cafe offer for awhile; Al Hall, completely recovered from Lucille Ball, has eyes only for Maxine Lewis. They were at Leone's; Cornelia Otis Skinner dropped over on the "Topper Returns" set to visit her old friend, Roland Young; Joe E. Brown, ardent UCLA rooter, planed back to Hollywood to be on hand for the Uclans and USC tilt Saturday; hint to overly plump ladies: Jean Arthur thinks fencing is the best way to keep a streamlined figure.

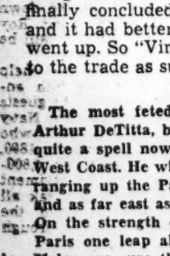
Could Mickey Rooney have been serious when he said his heart belonged to Linda Darnell? He's been giving a big rush to Tina Thayer; Wayne Morris told friends at the sky room at the airport, where he breakfasts with Pat Stewart every morning, that when his divorce is final he and Pat will wed; Cobina That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Nov. 29.

Little girls whose careers have just started should be very careful about taking French leave from the studio while they are in the midst of production, 'cause they always get found out. Seems Veronica Lake, an Arthur Hornblow discovery, who's playing the heavy in "I Wanted Wings," decided to spend the holiday with her husband, John Detlie, who's with "The Bad Man" troupe in Gallup, N. Mex. So, without saying anything, she gets in a car, has her visit, and starts back to Hollywood lickity-split. The car turns over outside of Gallup, she's able to crawl out from under it, her face unmarred, but with a broken toe and body bruises, and returns to the El Rancho Hotel, with a doctor in attendance. Meantime, Hollywood is scouring the town — she's wanted on the set. When they finally locate her, she's put on a special plane and returned, and is now finishing her scenes in the picture. If she's as good as they think she will be, all will be forgiven. If she's not, her career may die a-budding.



HOPPER

You've got to hand it to Hollywood for the way they've responded to the Community Chest. Metro alone is way over the $110,000 quota, with a $2,500 contribution from Garbo, $2,000 from Joan Crawford, and $1,500 from Norma Shearer. Remember all the fuss last year when Garbo, after contributing $5,000 to the Finnish Relief, sent $200 to the Chest, which was returned with a very curt note from Harry Warner?

During that Carole Lombard-Myron Selznick suit as to whether he remains Carole's manager, Danny Winkler, who was an associate of Selznick's and got his training there, was asked if Selznick was the best manager in Hollywood. He replied, "No—I am" . . . Now you won't believe it, but Vivien Leigh claims that Myron Selznick ruined her career by getting her the part of Scarlett in "GWTW." She would have preferred Cathy in "Wuthering Heights." She thought it was a better part. You tell one—I'm slightly ill.

Twentieth Century has mentioned every actress in Hollywood for the lead in "How Green Was My Valley," and I'm wondering why they haven't thought to sign up Martha Scott, who'd be terrific.

Carole Landis, current girl friend of Franchot Tone, who refused to be our "Ping" girl because it was "too undignified," will soon advertise in a national magazine a new kind of gut for tennis and badminton racquets. Hollywood must have taught her that intestinal fortitude is very important—and pays dividends.

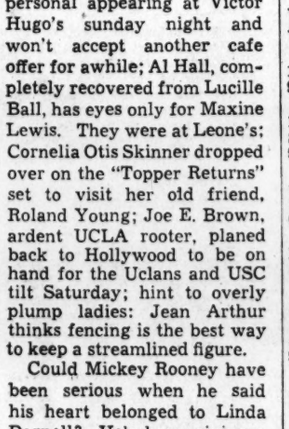
Two of the nicest newcomers are Mr. and Mrs. Rene Claire. Incidentally, she's the best walker in town. Covers at least 5 miles a day on foot—got the habit in England, and says it's the best recipe for health and beauty. She's a walking advertisement for both.

You'll giggle when you hear the name of the Hollywood matron who's making passes at Jock Whitney. Her nose is out of joint, however, because up to date, his affections haven't been accompanied by a diamond bracelet.

That 6-feet 4-inch blond heartbeat from Virginia, Stirling Hayden, who's played his first part in "Virginia," is begging the studio, of all things, to let him do a western, so he'll gain experience.

During dinner the other night, our own Upton Sinclair asked H. G. Wells if he was going to visit the Big Chief in Washington before going back to London, Dec. 10. H. G. replied, "No, the last time I went on for a special visit, he did all the talking. I could have stayed home and listened to it over the air."

Play Girls



EMERALD SISTERS featured as "modern youths at play" in the new stage revue now on the boards at Loew's Capitol Theater

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Nov. 29.

SCHOOL DEPARTMENT: A new book, "Curiouser and and Curiouser," is being released for publication. It was written by Dorothy Rice Sims, the inventor of psychic bridge and wife of P. Hal Sims, the bridge expert . . . The publishers invited George S. Kaufman to write the introduction, and sent the manuscript to him—a manuscript which, while most interesting, contained many mistakes in spelling. Kaufman read it carefully, and then reported back: "I'm not very good at it myself—but the first rule of spelling is there's only one 'z' in 'is.'"

LYONS

DRAMA DEPARTMENT: Lewis Milestone attended a rehearsal of Ferenc Molnar's play, in which one of the actors was supposed to portray the role of a man whose bearing is decidedly Oriental . . . "Well, what do you think of his performance?" Milestone asked Molnar . . . "There are three things wrong with it," the playwright criticized. "He's too gentle, too genteel and too gentile."

EMPLOYMENT DEPARTMENT: W. Somerset Maugham is telling of the party he gave in his Villa at Cap Ferrat, at which the British stars, Gladys Cooper and Ernest Thesinger, were present . . . During the party, Thesinger cornered Maugham, and asked him: "Willie, why don't you write a part for me?" . . . "I've written many parts for you," Maugham confessed—but Gladys always plays them."

TRAVEL DEPARTMENT: Huntington Hartford, who is one of America's wealthiest young men, prefers to be described as the reporter for PM, instead of as the heir to the A. & P. fortune. Hartford resents the stories which refer to his arriving for work in an elegant, chauffeur-driven car which then is parked three blocks away from his office . . . "That part of it is true," is the distinction Hartford points out. "But then after I get to the office and go out on assignment, I always use the subway—until I return to the office. When my job's done, I use the car."

FINANCE DEPARTMENT: Eddie Davis, author of the Al Jolson show, discussed his newest musical with Eddie Cantor. Davis has finished the book for this show, and asked for 2 per cent of the gross as his fee . . . Cantor offered 1 per cent, which Davis, his former cab driver, refused to accept . . . "But Eddie," Cantor told him, "Noel Coward gets 2 per cent" . . . Davis showed Cantor a newspaper clipping reporting Coward's presence in Australia, and then left, saying: "All right. Then get Coward."

CRIME DEPARTMENT: A few years ago the story of Joseph L. Steinmetz appeared on every front-page in New York. He was convicted of slaying his wife and a clergyman, in the Knights of Columbus Hotel in midtown Manhattan, and was sent to Sing Sing prison . . . Steinmetz has been released from Ossining. He's at Ellis Island now, awaiting deportation.

ETIQUETTE DEPARTMENT: Charlie MacArthur and Henri Bernstein sat in Fefe's Monte Carlo until 4 a. m., discussing the world and its creatures. MacArthur began a long, philosophic discourse and Bernstein was unable to get his words in . . . "Henri, you're a charming fellow," MacArthur finally assured him. "Yes, you have great charm" . . . "But my greatest charm," Bernstein reminded, "is in being listened to."

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT: Undersecretary of State Adolf A. Berle, jr., and Sidney Hillman of the National Defense Council, who were designated to represent the State Department at the inaugural ceremonies in Mexico City, will not attend—Berle, because of the pressure of foreign affairs, and Hillman, because of the labor situation . . . Fiorello LaGuardia, who also was designated, probably will be unable to attend. He's going to Washington tomorrow, for a conference.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT: Frederick Lonsdale was invited by the editors of Stage magazine to write an article of advice to incipient playwrights. He obliged, with a 1,000-word manuscript . . . Then Lonsdale added: "I have a suspicion the road to Heaven is paved with good first acts, but, alas, it takes a dramatist to write a second—and a genius, a third."

RADIO DEPARTMENT: Representative of the several broadcasting companies met in Washington Tuesday to celebrate the twentieth anniversary of radio. A special broadcast from London was featured. Ed Murrow, CBS's correspondent there, spoke about censorship, informed them that the censor was at his side right then, and said: "Well, sometime I win, and other times the censors win" . . . The British censor consented to broadcast, and said: "Murrow's wrong. We never lose" . . . "Actually," said Murrow, "I lose one of two arguments" . . . "No," corrected the censor. "Three."

Tour of a Big Movie Studio Like a Visit to a County Fair

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Nov. 29 (U.P.).—We almost walked our feet off on the concrete alleys separating the sound stages at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer today. We were just taking in the sights. It was better than a county fair. Even some of the jokes were funny.

Take the "Come Live With Me" set, which had a Connecticut farm inside sound stage 27. The grass was genuine, but the flowers were fake. Director Clarence Brown fidgeted while the experts hoisted tree limbs around to make shadows.

Costar James Stewart was earning his salary by being sound asleep in his dressing room with his hat over his eyes. Costar Hedy Lamarr was eating coffee cake.

Director Brown, who has to watch his waistline, was envious. He said he never knew that a girl with a figure like hers could eat the way she does. Yesterday Miss Lamarr had a tooth ache. She was quoted as saying:

"It's very bad to have an empty stomach and a tooth ache, too."

Norman Taurog had the rain turned on in stage 15, where it splashed the windows of a Nebraska prison office. Inside was Father Spencer Tracy, demanding of the warden to see prisoner Mickey Rooney. In production was "Men of Boys Town," a sequal to the tremendously successful "Boys Town," manufactured by the same crew.

An important member of the cast was 9-year-old Darryl Hichman, whose only other picture experience was a bit in "Grapes of Wrath." Director Taurog brought him to Metro.

"A couple of days ago," Taurog said, "this youngster completely stole a scene from Mickey. So the latter came to me and said, 'Now I know what Spencer Tracy went through for five years with me.'"

Taurog said young Rooney was the politest, most thoughtful and best behaved youngster he ever directed—and he's directed a lot of them. We've noticed something of the same. As far as we know Rooney is the only movie star in the business who says "Yes, sir," and "No, sir," to everybody, including the studio cops.

Wallace Berry on the "Bad Man" set was so rigged up in a Mexican suit of leather and double belts to carry his pistols that he creaked when he walked.

We walked nearly a mile, we bet, just to get to the next stage, where all the beauties in "Ziegfeld Girl" were supposed to be holding forth. Only they weren't.

Our next stop was "Wild Man of Borneo," with Frank Morgan playing the wild man in a dime museum and posing, after work, as a great Shakespearian actor. The set here was the museum, complete with a whiskery gent in an evening gown. Director Robert Sinclair said it was easier to put a man with whiskers into skirts for a bearded lady than it was to put whiskers on a woman.

Rumor Has B. C., Nebraska in Sugar Bowl

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Ten days hence the gentlemen who own and operate the big league ball clubs will assemble in Chicago, amid general denials that they are coveting their neighbors' ball players. To hear them tell it, they will be on the scene merely to listen to the minutes of last year's meeting. And then, in the best traditions of baseball meetings they will forsake that sham and come clean with the purposes they have in mind.

POVICH

In the American League, particularly, there isn't a club that can afford to stand pat when the talent goes on the block. In recent years, the Yankee officials at the meeting stood smilingly aloof as trades were broached, negotiated and made. The Yankees with their super teams were above participation in the market. But the Yankees are no longer smug. They need ball players as their third-place finish in 1940 indicated.

Here is the picture as our agents around the American League report it:

NEW YORK—The Yankees are definitely in the market for pitchers and at least one outfielder. Aside from Ernie Bonham, none of the Yankees' young pitchers tickled the risibilities last year of Manager Joe McCarthy. The Yankees never did quite recover from the injury to Lefty Gomez. And Red Ruffing, who had a horrible time winning near the end of the season, will be 38 by the start of next season. The Yanks are satisfied with only two of their outfielders—Joe DiMaggio and Charlie Keller. George Selkirk and Tommy Henrich did not contribute much toward taking up the slack in Yankee hitting and pitching. Shortstop Frankie Crosetti and Yankee wealth will be dangled before any teams inclined to trade with the Yanks.

BOSTON—The first team that shows any inclination to part with even a half decent pitcher will command the undivided interest of the Red Sox bosses. Boston's power and defense were profaned last season by the club's pathetic pitching. And the Red Sox will also be solidly in the market for a catcher, what with Jimmy Foxx refusing flatly to go behind the bat again. The Red Sox may be in a mood to give up one of their outfielders, probably Lou Finney, to make a deal. And there's always Tom Yawkey's check book as an added persuader.

WASHINGTON—The Nats' needs are as apparent as England's. The Washington club could use a second baseman, a shortstop, at least one more outfielder, another pitcher and perhaps a first baseman. They wouldn't spit in the face of a hitting catcher, either. Clark Griffith will doubtless put Joe Krakauskas on the block for what he will bring, and neither George Case, Buddy Lewis or Gerald Walker are considered fixtures. Griffith will make some sort of a bid, no doubt, for Benny McCoy, on whom the Athletics once asked waivers.

PHILADELPHIA—Connie Mack is all to painfully aware of the awful gap in his infield. At Chicago he is apt to talk terms with anybody who owns a competent second baseman or shortstop. McCoy failed at second last season and Mack never did have an acceptable shortstop all year. He will keep Al Rubeling at third base, and at first Dick Siebert probably qualified as the best player on the A's The A's wouldn't turn down a pitcher, either, but Connie Mack rarely buys pitchers from inside the league, preferring to develop 'em.

DETROIT—The pennant-winning Tigers will be, paradoxically, the saddest club at the meeting. They are forbidden, as champions, to make deals inside the league except by the waiver route and acceptable talent rarely passes on waivers. Needing a second baseman and a shortstop to give surcease to the aging Charley Gehringer and Dick Bartell, and having the wherewithal to pay for them, Owner Walter O. Briggs' hands are tied. The Tigers could use pitchers, too, but they will be only sad-faced bystanders at the meeting.

CLEVELAND—This is the club that probably can better afford to stand pat than any other in the league. The Indians, who finished only a game out of the lead, have everything except a hard-hitting outfield and their overtures for trades will be directed toward acquiring hitting strength. But Cleveland will be naturally reluctant to part with its pitchers who are wanted by everybody and, like the Tigers, they may not make a single deal.

CHICAGO—A pair of infield additions would round out the White Sox into a sound sort of pennant contender, Jimmy Dykes is thinking, and its infielders that he wants. The White Sox never were able to replace satisfactorily, Second Baseman Jackie Hayes, and at third base young Bob Kennedy's light hitting scarcely justified his presence at the post. The Sox have pitching, tolerable catching, they have Joe Kuhel at first and Luke Appling and third, and an acceptable outfield. They're in the market strictly for infielders.

ST. LOUIS—The Browns will put the emphasis on matching at the meeting. There wasn't a big league backstop on the St. Louis club throughout last year, unhappily for an otherwise well-balanced team. The Browns came up with fair pitching, a passel of hitters and an excellent defensive club outside of catching. The belief is that they'll trade Second Baseman Don Heffner to somebody who can give them a catcher.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Philadelphia, Nov. 29.—Tomorrow's Golden Anniversary game between the Army and Navy football teams will mark the fortieth rather than the fiftieth such contest. But it will still be golden. For 20 or 30 years the clubs have been reaping a golden harvest every time they met, whether or not they happened to be good teams or fourth rate teams. This year is no exception. The game will draw 102,000 persons and a season's record gate of about $400,000, the news which may Prod Mike Jacobs into trying to sign both outfits to long term contracts.

CONSIDINE

For this we would suggest that the respective cheer leaders—and they are the best sets of cheer leaders in their business—call for a long razmataz for the Cadet corps and the Midshipmen. For the boys in blue-gray and the boys in middy blue will be the prime lure at Philadelphia tomorrow. They will parade together for the first time in their history, and it should be a sight well worth the admission fee. There are few more thrilling sights and sounds in this land of ours than the Midshipmen, marching into a stadium to the tune of "Anchors Aweigh" or the robust Cadets, swinging along with breathless precision to a jaunty air like "on brave old Army team."

There will also be a football game, after the joint drill.

It will bring together a team ranked twenty-fifth in the country by the Williamson poll, Navy, and a team which isn't among the first sixty-three United States teams in the same poll, Army. The twenty-fourth team in the country is Columbia and the sixty-third team, which may be one or fifty places ahead of Army, on Williamson's unexpurgated list, is Vanderbilt. But a Columbia-Vanderbilt game in Philadelphia tomorrow afternoon would be lucky to draw 5,000 persons, and the price would have to be kept down to lure that many Philadelphians away from their pepper-pot. Which just goes to prove that it don't mean a thing if you ain't got that swing.

Navy, of course, has the better record. It beat William and Mary by two touchdowns, Cincinnati by two touchdowns, Princeton by one, Drake by three, Yale by three, lost to Penn by three, to Notre Dame by one and played a scoreless tie with Columbia. It outgained Penn and Notre Dame handsomely. Army beat Williams by a point, was tied by Harvard, lost 45-0 to Cornell, lost to Lafayette by three touchdowns, to Notre Dame by one, to Brown, 13-9; to Penn 48-6, and to Princeton four touchdowns to three. Off comparative scores Navy should beat Army by three or four touchdowns. And probably won't.

The charm of this game is its color, its wonderful competitive fervor, its tradition and its social significance, in the order named.

We'll consider the third lure, for the moment. A lot of the game's charm, regardless of whether the contest is being performed by great stars or sweaty incompetents is the memories it provokes. When Mazur runs tomorrow he will be more than Mazur in the eyes of thousands in the vast municipal stadium. He will also be a brisk, if Ersatz, reproduction of Cagle, Meyer, French, Garbisch, Oliphant, etc., etc., just as the work of Busik of Navy shake loose the dust on the athletic tombs of Dalton, Larson, Borries and the Ingrams.

Some curious things have happened in the 40 Army-Navy games which, thanks to three breaks in athletic relations, date back to 1891. Army has won 22 of the 40 games, Navy 15 and there have been three ties— including perhaps the most exciting game of the whole series, the 21-21 draw in 1926. Except for the 1891 game, which saw Navy win 24-0, the Midshipmen have never been able to win by more than one touch-

Aggies' Loss Crushes Hope Of Coast Bid

New Orleans to Issue Official News Today; Tennessee May Get Rose Bowl Invitation

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Nov. 29.—When Pete Layden galloped through the Texas Aggies at Austin yesterday he just about clinched it for Boston College to meet Nebraska in the Sugar Bowl a month hence.

The rumor was all over town today that the combination is Boston-Nebraska, the formal announcement to be made late tomorrow afternoon, always provided the two get by Holy Cross and Kansas State unscathed.

No one denied the reports, not even the Sugar Bowl committee members who were in deep and numerous conferences, with a heavy air of expectancy hanging about. Some of the officers, it was learned, are even passing up the traditional Louisiana football classic—L. S. U. vs. Tulane—at Baton Rouge tomorrow to be around when the news is slipped out.

Miss Rose Bowl by Defeat

The experts doped it out today that when the Aggies fell before Crain and his aides, they missed the Rose Bowl special, and Tennessee caught it. Boston College has been a virtual cinch on one and of the classic for a month. Now the Cornhuskers apparently have won the right to be the first Middle Western team ever to play in the Sugar Bowl, which is a sellout already except for the fraction of its 73,000 seats the sponsors have saved for the contestants.

"It looks now as if the Sugar Bowl might get Boston College and Nebraska," Sports Editor Harry Martinez, of the New Orleans States, wrote today. "All along most everyone thought it would be Boston and Tennessee, and this might be the game yet, but we figure Clark Shaughnessy is going to lean to the South, where he coached so many years, and favor Tennessee with the Rose Bowl bid."

Coach Is Popular

One big factor in Nebraska's favor is the popularity here of Coach Biff Jones, who is one of the few persons who ever put the block on the late Huey Long, whose name no longer is so sacrosanct in Louisiana politics since the last election.

Jones heaved Huey out of the Louisiana State University dressing room between halves of the Tulane game in 1934 when the Senator breezed in to give "my team" a little pep talk. Jones had grown a little tired of Long strutting with the team and band, and had already made up his mind to go to Oklahoma, en route to Nebraska.

The feeling hereabouts is that Nebraska's single setback at the hands of the Nation's greatest, Minnesota, is only a slight blot, and that the game will be one of the greatest ever played here.

A Sample of Slugging Which Marked Eagle-Oriole Match

This is a view of first period free-for-all between Washington and Baltimore ice hockey players at Riverside Stadium last night. Looming large in foreground, arms interlocked and fists flailing, are John McTeer, of the Eagles, and Bob Dill, of the Orioles, who were the principal figures in the fight. Behind them, Don Coughlin (5), of Orioles, mixes it up with an unidentified Washington player while Referee Stevenson calls for order

Conn Winner Over Savold In Slow Bout

Pittsburgher Takes Unanimous Decision Before 12,000 in N. Y.

By Jack Cuddy

United Press Staff Correspondent.

New York, Nov. 29.—Billy Conn, campaigning for a heavyweight title shot, used Lee Savold of Des Moines as a punching bag tonight for 12 rounds and won the unanimous decision with ease before 13,000 fans at Madison Square Garden.

Conn, who already holds the light-heavyweight crown, got blood-smeared considerably in the later going, although at no time was he in serious trouble. The fight was so dull that the fans were booing for action during many of the rounds.

Savold, advertised as a knockout artist, failed to use his "deadly" right throughout the bout, and the only damage he inflicted on fast-stepping Billy was with a left hook that opened a gash beneath the light-heavy king's eye in the eighth round and had Billy's nose bleeding profusely in the last three sessions.

Conn's 175-pound crown was not at stake because Savold scaled

Possible Bowl Choices In Final Tests Today

Fordham Meets N. Y. U.; Boston College Plays Holy Cross; Nebraska vs. Kansas State; 'Bama Opposes Miss. State; Stanford vs. California

New York, Nov. 29.—The 1940 collegiate football season closes tomorrow with an abbreviated schedule but with most teams being considered for various "Bowls" on New Year's Day going into action.

In the East, Fordham, believed already invited to the Orange Bowl in Miami, finishes its season against New York University, its bitter intra-City rival. The Rams are 4 to 1 favorites.

Unbeaten Boston College tackles an oft-beaten Holy Cross eleven in another game which has a bowl bid at stake. Should the Eagles defeat the Crusaders, it is expected they will be invited to play in the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans on New Year's Day. The Texas Aggies, who were upset by Texas yesterday, likely will provide opposition for Coach Frank Leahy's charges in the post-season classic.

Colorful Service Game

From the standpoint of color, the annual Army-Navy game in Philadelphia is the day's top tussle. A crowd of 102,000 is estimated to fill Municipal Stadium in the 50th anniversary of gridiron activities between the two military schools. In the only other major contest in the East a strong Duquesne outfit

Tom Harmon Gets Raspberries—Two Crates From Millers

By the Associated Press

Minneapolis, Nov. 29.—After a debate conducted with mock solemnity, city aldermen approved a motion today to send two crates of raspberries—the edible variety—to Tommy Harmon.

Recently in a radio talk Harmon said Michigan should have beaten Minnesota by three touchdowns. Minnesota won, 7-6.

Before approving the motion the aldermen amended it to have the two aldermen who proposed it foot the bill. Aldermen Stanley Anderson and W. J. Meagher cheerfully agreed.

Army Underdogs Planning Strategy to Sink Navy

Free-for-Alls Mark Riverside Contest Before 3,000 Fans

By Jack Munhall

In the most riotous match that Riverside Stadium has ever beheld, the Washington Eagles administered a physical and statistical beating to the Baltimore Orioles last night to extend their Eastern Amateur League lead to two full games.

The score was 8-3.

In the presence of 3,000 paying customers who screamed and yelled and threw programs and other debris into the aisles and onto the ice, the bitter intercity rivals slugged each other around in free-for-alls in the first and third periods, and embellished the roughhouse with some great hockey.

No less than 16 sentences were dished out by the overworked officials, including match penalties and temporary suspensions to big John McTeer, of Washington, and Bob Dill, of Baltimore, who were the principal figures in the first brawl.

Dill's Eye Cut

Besides his jolting penalty, Dill sustained a bad cut over his left eye. Guy Roach, of Baltimore, who mixed it up first with Mike Germann and then Frank Mailley in the third melee, was sporting a nice "mouse" when last seen, and Jack Dyte, belligerent Baltimore defense, was gashed in the head by a stick.

Baltimore got away to a 2-1 lead in the first period, but the Eagles flashed superb teamwork to forge ahead, 5-3, in the second, and then added an additional three tallies in the finale. Puglistic Paul Courteau was the Eagles' scoring leader with three goals; Hal Dewey picked up a pair. Jim McCurrey, Ross Knipfel and especially Len Burrage were outstanding on defense for Washington, though the absence of McTeer placed an extra heavy burden on them.

It was Washington's seventh victory in nine starts, and avenged the 5-4 setback by the Orioles in Baltimore Wednesday when the groundwork was laid for tonight's slugging.

As regards future records, the first period will be marked: Baltimore, 2; Washington, 1. But for those who saw those hectic 20 minutes which were crammed into an elapsed time

50th Clash To Draw Full House Again

Seats Still Available But 102,000 Fans Are Expected; Mazur Worries Middie Coach

By Bill Boni

Associated Press Sports Writer.

Philadelphia, Nov. 29.—Navy was top-dog by as much as 1 to 3 and Army simply a doggedly determined underdog tonight on the eve of the fiftieth anniversary game in their thrill-studded, color-jammed football series.

Philadelphia was in its customary holiday mood, which meant an impartial display of banners and an impartial increase in prices for everything from hot dogs to hotel rooms.

There was just one item to set this apart from other Army-Navy games in recent memory. For the first time reputable ticket agencies were offering seats at only a slight charge above the $4.40 face value, prospective ticket buyers were fighting off scalpers instead of vice versa, and Navy headquarters went so far as to announce that a small number of tickets would go on public sale outside the vast municipal stadium at 8 a. m. tomorrow.

Held at Stations

This is due to the fact that military orders that don't include leaves are keeping many Army and Navy men at their posts.

But at kickoff time—1:30 p. m., E. S. T., tomorrow—the setting promises to be the same as usual, with all 102,000 seats probably sold for the fifth successive meeting in the stadium, with enough pretty girls to do the most conscientious Hollywood producer's heart good, and with enough chrysanthemums to have a flower show.

The odds on Navy are considerably stronger than they have been in the last five years. Chiefly responsible for this is Army's failure to win a major game since it beat Navy in 1938, and its poor showing this fall in gaining only a one-point triumph over Williams and a tie with Harvard in eight starts.

Navy, on the other hand, raced through its first five games before running into lickings by Penn and Notre Dame, in both of which it had the statistical edge, and a scoreless tie with Columbia. Yet the Middies, realizing they have developed most of their power between the 20-yard lines and wasted it beyond those points, aren't conceding anything to an Army squad at top strength for the first time this year.

Mazur Called Best

The Middies coach, Marine Maj. Emery E. (Swede) Larson, feels quite free to say Army has potentially the day's best back in sophomore Hank Mazur, of Lowell, Mass. Mazur can kick, is dangerous any time he gets his hands on the ball, and should give the Cadets a double passing threat in collaboration with Johnny Hatch, starting quarterback from Fort Sill, Okla.

Navy will have a weight advantage in line and backfield—191 to Army's 183 from end to end, and 177 to 168 in the backfield, where the Army average is hauled down by the fact that 154-pound Roy Johnson, of Wyoming, Ohio, will be in at right half.

Two side attractions will help the teams celebrate the 50th anniversary of the rivalry. As guests in the stands will be five Navy men and one Army man who played in the first game in 1890, while before the game the 1,800-man cadet corps and the regiment of 2,200 midshipmen will break all precedent by parading onto the field and then going through maneuvers there together.

Heading the customary list of dignitaries will be Secretary of the Army Stinson and Assistant Secretary Patterson and Secretary of the Navy Knox and Assistant Secretary Compton. Other prominent boxholders will be Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff; Admiral Harold H. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations; Rear Admiral Wilson Brown, head of the Naval Academy, and Brig. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger, superintendent of the military academy.

2,600 Midshipmen Set For Service Clash

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 29.—With the football squad of 43 players encamped at the Manufacturers' Country Club on the outskirts of Philadelphia, the regiment of nearly 2,600 midshipmen, fired by enthusiasm, were all set tonight for the departure for the Quaker City tomorrow morning. Bonfires and other demonstrations have been prevalent during the last two days.

Military regulations were temporarily "suspended," so to speak, as the middies in their jubilation marched to and from their recitation halls. Placards bearing all sorts of slogans appear all about the Gov-

Fronczek and Muha Are Voted Best Blockers in Virginia

2 Stars Top '40 All-State GridSelection

William and Mary Places Two Players On Team; Dudley, Of Virginia, Honored

Associated Press Sports Writer

Richmond, Va., Nov. 29.—Old Dominion college football coaches, checking back over the individual performances of their players during the season now closing, singled out Sophomore Joe Muha, of V. M. I., and Andy Fronczek, of Richmond, for acclamation as Virginia's most accomplished blockers.

The bruising, speedy Muha was the choice of the 22 mentors participating in the poll by a wide margin over such blocking back specialists as his own teammate and captain, Byron (Ripper) Walker; Harold Fields, of William and Mary's State champions; Harry McClaugherty, of Virginia; Dick Kern, of Virginia Tech; Bobby Pinck, of Washington and Lee, and Joe Mack, of Richmond.

Fronczek had a closer scrap for top honors as the best blocking lineman with Billy Walker, of V. M. I.; Garrard Ramsey, of W. and M., and Bill Tate, of V. P. I., all guards, getting considerable support.

Other Fine Blockers

Backs Harvey (the Stud) Johnson, of W. and M.; Nelson Catlett, of V. M. I., and Bill Dudley, of Virginia, and Linemen John Rulevich, of W. and L., and Charlie Gondak, of W. and M., also were cited for their blocking by some of the coaches.

In addition to selecting the outstanding men in the vital grid business of blocking, the mentors also looked over the 400 members of Old Dominion college squads and honored 11 of them with berths on the 1940 Associated Press All-State team.

Four of the all-stars were chosen from the William and Mary team, which kept its slate clean against State foes; three were picked from Richmond, two from V. M. I. and one each from Virginia Tech and Virginia.

The 1940 Team

A quartet of those selected were sophomores and they ousted from the team three members of the 1939 All-State squad.

The 1940 team:

Charlie Gondak, W. and M., and Dick Humbert, Richmond, ends.

Andy Fronczek, Richmond, and Marvin Bass, W. and M., tackles.

Billy Walker, V. M. I., and Garrard Ramsey, W. and M., guards.

Bill Zydiak, Virginia Tech, center.

Bill Dudley, Virginia; Joe MuHa, V. M. I.; Arthur Jones, Richmond, and Harvey Johnson, W. and M., backs.

Fronczek led the balloting with the unanimous first-team support of the coaches, while Dudley, with a few votes less, was the most popular backfield choice.

Battle for End Posts

The battle over end positions was the closest with V. M. I's. Luther Sexton narrowly missing a berth. Rulevich and Harold Tipton, V. M. I.'s 260-pounder, got a heavy tracing for the tackle spots and Bill Tate of Tech and Steve Hanasiak of W. and L. also had their supporters among the coaches for the guard positions. Billy Suhling, Virginia Soph, and W. and L.'s Capt. Jack Managan, whose all-star chances received a setback when he was injured severely in the West Virginia game, made commendable bids for the center post.

Bob Pritchard, V. M. I. speedster, and George (Buckeye) Warriner, 1939 All-Staters, were dropped to the reserve squad backfield this year to team with Herb Thomas, the elusive Gobblers who tallied 60 points, and Waldo Matthews, W. and M. Lee McLaughlin, Virginia tackle and captain, who was an All-State fixture of two seasons, was hampered by injuries and was dropped to the third team.

The honor team broke records for the number of sophomores recognized and for the number of W. and M. Indians selected—and it probably embraces more genuine gridiron talent than any similar State team in a decade.

of 45 minutes, they will be remembered as productive of the wildest hockey Washington has ever seen.

The free-for-all that flared midway the period was not unexpected, for from the moment the arch intercity rivals took the ice it was evident that anything short of mayhem would be committed. Every time a player would charge down the ice he was holding his stick chest high and anyone who interfered knew what to expect.

Finally the inevitable occurred: McTeer, storming the Orioles' goal, collided with Dill, of the Orioles, and both laid to with their sticks. When they were separated blood was pouring from over Dill's left eye.

Shaking off the sympathetic hands of his teammates, Dill rushed McTeer, who met him with flailing fists. Soon practically everybody on both squads was swinging.

Penalty Box Jammed

Finally, about three minutes later, the officials got around to the grim business of dishing out penalties and when they were through the penalty box was jammed with the most offenders ever to occupy it simultaneously. When the Eagles heard that McTeer and Dill had both been ejected from the match, they protested strenuously, claiming that McTeer's banishment should not have been as serious since Dill had started the fight.

Less than a minute after the ice had been cleared and both teams were operating minus two men—the least number allowed them—Grigor, of Baltimore, and Mailley, of Washington, drew two minute roughing penalties and spares had to be sent in.

In the second period, the boys stopped swinging their fists and started swinging their sticks at the puck, and there resulted some of the fastest hockey and most expert shooting seen here. At the end of the second 20 minutes of play, Washington led, 5-3.

Eagles Strike Fast

With both teams shy one player as a result of unexpired penalties of the first period, the Eagles took the upper hand and threatened in the early minutes. They got a break when Chick Webster, of the Orioles, was meted out an interference penalty, and they capitalized it to the extent of three goals.

Stanford 3-1 Choice Over California Today

Indians Carry Unblemished Record and Rose Bowl Prestige Into Game at Berkeley; 82,400 to See Rivals Clash

By the Associated Press

Berkeley, Calif., Nov. 29.—Stanford, the football team that rose from muck to magnificence in one season, stakes an unblemished record and the right to ride into the Rose Bowl unchallenged, in a game tomorrow with its oldest and most bitter rival—California.

On the outcome hinges a record that would be unequalled in the 25-year history of the Pacific Coast Conference. The 1939 Stanford team finished last, unable to win a game and tying one.

Virtually the same squad, under a new coach, Clark Shaughnessy, this year is knocking at the championship door, the only undefeated, untied major college eleven in the Far West.

Shaughnessy's Chicago team last year floundered in the depths. At Stanford his "T" formation has bamfoozled eight successive opponents, and the odds today were 3-to-1 it would puzzle California into defeat.

The largest crowd of the season, 82,400, was expected for the forty-eighth renewal of a classic founded in 1892.

Stanford, on the basis of comparative records with mutual opponents, its superior speed and passing attack, was virtually the unanimous choice. Return of Norm Standlee, first string fullback, may add strength. California's advantage, if any, was in the psychological matter of "underdog" and the fact it is the home team.

Conn Winner Over Savold In Slow Bout

Pittsburgher Takes Unanimous Decision Before 12,000 in N. Y.

186¾ pounds, 12½ more than Conn, who registered 174¼.

The United Press score sheet gave Billy 10 rounds and only the tenth and twelfth to blond Savold.

The Des Moines battler made his best showing in the tenth when he landed several hard left hooks to Billy's head, and caused his nose to bleed freely. The twelfth round was given to Savold by Referee Arthur Donovan because of Conn's low left hook to the groin, which was called a foul by Donovan.

Savold's performance was extremely disappointing to the fans, who had seen him fight in New York but once before. That was last January when Lee knocked out big Jim Robinson in impressive fashion. At that time Savold looked like a fast, dangerous puncher with either hand. But tonight he appeared to be glued to the floor, he was so slow on his feet. He seemed unable to evade the left hooks that Conn rained to the head, and he used his right only for futile protective purposes. The only thing that prevented Savold from being kayoed was Conn's complete lack of a punch.

Conn May Get Baer Bout

Conn's victory—his fifth over a heavyweight opponent—probably will earn him an indoor match with Maxie Baer in January or February. Promoter Mike Jacobs was considering such a match at the ringside tonight.

Although Conn won easily, he was so unimpressive during the few times that Savold went to work on him, most writers and fans were convinced that handsome Billy would do better to try his luck against Maxie Baer or some other top-flight heavies, before attempting to enter the ring with Louis.

In his dressing room, Savold was unable to explain his poor showing. He said "Conn never hurt me. I guess I had stage fright. I carried my right around for most of the fight before I realized it."

Conn said "I knew I had him during the first nine rounds. So then I went out and slugged with him. I was surprised at how hard he can punch."

Fans Pay $31,170

Promoter Mike Jacobs announced the gross gate as $31,170 and the paid attendance as 12,750 persons.

The preliminaries:

Cal Cagni, 150½, Cresskill, N. J., outpointed Norman Rubio, 142, Albany, N. Y. (6); Coley Welch, 160½, Portland, Me., stopped Maxie Long, 156½, Dallas, Tex. (3); Vincent Fratello, 157¾, Hackensack, N. J., outpointed Jimmy Cass, 160¾, New York (6); Johnny Cregan, 139, Pittsburgh, outpointed Ray Bonti, 144, New York (4); Al Delaney, 187½, Canada, outpointed Willie Pavlovich, 177¾, Brooklyn (6).

Wings Break Jinx, Defeat Hawks, 3 to 1

5,203 See National League Game Which Reverses 1939 Tables

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Nov. 29.—The Detroit Red Wings tonight accomplished something they couldn't do all last season—a victory over the Chicago Blackhawks.

In a brisk, bruising battle witnessed by 5,203 fans, Detroit emerged victorious, 3 to 1, to take a four-point lead over the Hawks in the struggle for second place in the National Hockey League standings.

The Wings snapped in a goal in each period, acquiring a 3-0 lead before Chicago could score. Rookie Joe Carveth, Sid Abel and Ebbie Goodfellow counted in order for Detroit; Goodfellow, after a nifty play with Syd Howe and Gus Giesebrecht, while Chicago was shorthanded.

Cully Dahlstrom connected for Chicago on a power play with Detroit one man short.

Eddie Wares, of the Wings, suffered a possible wrist fracture. The victory marked the seventh straight game Detroit has gone without defeat. The Wings have not been beaten since they lost their second start of the season on Toronto ice.

Possible Choices To Bowls in Tests

travels cross-town in Pittsburgh to meet a definitely "de-emphasized" Carnegie Tech team.

The solitary "big" game in the Midwest between Nebraska and Kansas State grew in importance overnight when it was reported from the West Coast that the Cornhuskers, beaten only by Minnesota this year, were the leading choice to receive the coveted Rose Bowl invitation. The Huskers are almost prohibitive favorites over their corn belt rivals.

In the South, Alabama will tackle Mississippi State for big stakes. The winner of this evenly matched battle probably will be the South's choice to play Fordham in the Orange Bowl. Mississippi State was established a slight favorite after having decisively whipped Mississippi last Saturday.

Undefeated Tennessee, a candidate for nearly all the bowl contests, plays Vanderbilt in the season's finale; unpredictable Pitt travels to Durham, N. C., to engage Duke in a big intersectional game; Florida battles Auburn; Georgia tackles Georgia Tech for State honors and Louisiana moves against Tulane.

The Far West schedule is dotted with a number of good games, but the highlight fracas will be between unbeaten Stanford and muchmauled California. The surprising Indians, playing their first season under Coach Clark Shaughnessy, practically have cinched honors to represent the West in Pasadena on New Year's Day.

Elsewhere, Washington meets Washington State, Southern California engages U. C. L. A., Oregon State plays host to Oregon, and Arizona tackles Marquette and Santa Clara battles Oklahoma in intersectional tussles.

Atlantic City Eleven Host To Western

Western High gridmen, champions of the District public schools, close out their season today when they engage Atlantic City High on the out-of-town gridiron.

The trip constitutes the Red Raiders' only foreign invasion of the season, their longest excursion previously having been to Alexandria to face George Washington High.

Twenty-three players, including All-Metropolitan Jack Xanten and Jake Hilleary, are in the squad which Coach Dan Ahearn will lead against a team which has won six of its eight games so far. The team will not return until Sunday.

Farley's 'Angel' In Yankee Deal Proves a Fizzle

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 29.—Another reputed "Angel" in the expected purchase of the Yankees took flight today when Charles F. Williams, wealthy Cincinnati insurance executive, said he was prepared to invest only a nominal sum in such a venture.

Williams, a close personal friend of James A. Farley, who is trying to swing a deal to make himself president of the Yankee baseball empire, said he was here strictly to attend a series of insurance conventions.

"Oh, I might buy a little stock if Jim takes over the club," he admitted. "I understand Jim expects to make them an offer soon."

He was asked if, by a "little stock," he might possibly have a sum in mind like, say, $1,000,000. Farley is understood to need that much in cash, and more, to swing the deal.

"That's good," Williams applauded. "Thanks for the compliment."

Schroyer, Jarman Pace Palace Rollers

168 Game, 421 Set Best; E. Sebastian Tops Ladies' League

Schroyer, Uptown Liquor, and Paul Jarman, Columbia Specialty, were kings of the Chevy Chase Commercial's meet at the Ice Palace last night, the former taking a 168 game, with Paul up to his old tricks with a 421 set, sparking his boys to a 623 high-team game. The Ramblers took the set with 1,815 to remain in first place, followed by the Hot Shoppes and Royal Tavern.

BROOKLAND

In the Brookland Ladies' meet, Evelyn Sebastian, Gulf Service, had high game with 124, as Margaret O'Brien, Michigan Park Market, took the set with 335, which helped her team to a high game of 524 and set count of 1,506. Brookland Recreation also had a 524 team game.

ARCADIA

Gene Goodman, Paul's Auto Shop, had high game of 136 in the Ladies' Independent meet, with Lucile Young, Arcade Pontiac, taking the set with 360. Paul's Auto had team game of 544, with Arcade Pontiac taking the set with 1,556. Greyhounds, D. D. W.'s and Arcade Pontiac took all three from Forsythe Shoes, Fleischman's Yeast and United Typewriters in the order named.

Men and women of the Commerce Department discovered that Aslakson, Coast and Geodetic Survey, was the hero with highs of 1331359, which led his quintet to team tops of 574 and 1,662. In the ladies' loop, Tyler, C. A. A., had high game with 113, while Misses Jones, Census and Roberts, Weather Bureau, divided set honors with 309. The C. A. A. girls took team game with 475, but hand to stand back as the Census counted 1,360 pins for high set.

RECREATION

The F. B. I. Senior League was led by Harry Stone, Pebbles and Saviola, Falcons, with game and set, the former taking a 139 count, with the latter rolling 334 to win. The Priors were best of the teams with 536, 1,500. Carl Voelker, Falcons, had a near-high game of 134. In the F. B. I. Junior League it was Metros who counted 134, 316 to top the others. The Tigers took team highs of 498, 1,423.

ICE PALACE

S. E. Burt, Washington quintet, was best man in the L. D. S. Church meet with highs of 123, 321. The Seventies team took high counts of 464 and 1,356. Arlington leads the loop with 13 wins and 8 losses, with Washington, Chevy Chase and Council next.

CONVENTION HALL

John Sullivan had 174 for game and a big set of 428 to lead the G. A. O. boys. The Claimsh team took team highs with 620-1823, the latter mark a season top.

The Navy Yard Third Section saw Frye, Locomotive, the best for the set count with 359 which sparked his boys to high team set of 1598. Locomotive and Foundry teams 1, 2 and 3 took best two out of three from Inspectors, Proof, West Shop and Coppersmiths, respectively.

MOUNT RAINIER

Hugh Crawley led F. and A. No. 1 pinmen to victory last night in the Navy Yard competition when he rolled a season's high set of 409, following a high game of 151. The team had a 1,747 score.

Drawing Room No. 1 turned in a 1,762 to take high place for the season. Bill Baumann aided with a 379.

Vols' Bob Foxx Again Named OnHonorTeam

Tennessee, Alabama, Miss. State Dominate All-Southeastern Club

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Nov. 28.—Jot down the words "home boys make good," and you have the story of Dixie football in 1940.

Men from six of the league's 13 teams make up the eighth annual Associated Press All-Southeastern football team, selected by vote of the conference coaches. And on the first-string eleven only one player lists his home as far north as West Virginia, while seven are attending school in their native States.

Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi State dominated the selections, the first two placing three more players each and Mississippi State two. Vanderbilt, Mississippi and Auburn filled out the team.

Number one choice of the coaches was Tennessee's great combination wingback and tailback, Bob Foxx. Eleven of the 12 mentors participating named him on their first eleven, for the second year in a row.

Second highest was another Tennessee great, Bob Suffridge, cat-like guard, who has been the big gun in the Vol line all season. Ten of the 12 picked him for first-string.

Third in the balloting was beamshouldered Marshall (Abe) Shires, Tennessee's line-smashing tackle, who likewise made All-Southeastern for the second successive year.

1940 Is Jinx For Gridiron's 'Streak' Teams

Georgetown, Cornell, Texas Aggies Finally Victims of Big Upsets

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 29.—The year 1940 long will be remembered as the graveyard of three of the longest football winning streaks among major colleges.

Georgetown fell before Boston College after piling up a string of 23 straight. Cornell won 18 in a row before bowing to Dartmouth and the Texas Aggies had a record of 19 successive triumphs before losing to Texas yesterday. The records of Georgetown and Cornell each included a tie.

After losing the final game of the 1937 season to Maryland, 12-2, Georgetown won eight in 1938, seven and tied Syracuse in 1939 and chalked up seven more victories before losing, 19-18, to Boston College. The Aggies also dropped the final game of the 1937 season, 7-6, to Texas, and then started a record that carried them through ten games in 1939, the Sugar Bowl game with Tulane last New Year's Day and eight this season.

Cornell started its string in 1938 after losing, 19-17, to Syracuse. The Big Red finished out that season with three victories and a scoreless tie with Penn, accounted for eight straight in 1939 and had won six more this year before they were upset, 3-0, by Dartmouth in the famous "fifth down" game.

Redskins Lose Hoffman for Eagle Battle

Injured Knee Will Keep Blocking Back Out of Sunday's Game

The Redskins, preparing for their crucial National Professional League clash with the Philadelphia Eagles tomorrow at Griffith Stadium, were cheered and then disheartened yesterday as reports from their hospital corps seeped in.

A hopeful note was the return of Frankie Filchock, passing and running star, to the team after a stay in Emergency Hospital that began on November 19, when a Chicago Bear cleat seriously inflamed his left side. He was able to work out, even showed up well despite his enforced idleness, but there was some doubt that he would be ready for the Eagles.

On the dark side of the ledger was an announcement that Bob Hoffman, rookie blocking back, will definitely miss tomorrow's game with a damaged knee.

Otherwise the team was in good spirits and health as the game which will give it a clean-cut Eastern Division title or force a playoff approached. Particularly heartening was the work of Andy Farkas, dazzling ball-lugger, who only last week returned to action after being damaged before the season got under way. Farkas played only a few minutes against the Giants, but Coach Ray Flaherty said he would be used a-plenty against the Eagles.

If Filchock is able to play tomorrow, Flaherty's usual method of substituting full teams at each quarter may be resumed. Key man of the second and fourth-quarter elevens, Filchock's passing was sorely missed as the Redskins bowed before the Giants last week.

Philadelphia Cops Go Up in Air Over Army-Navy Traffic

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Nov. 29.—Philadelphia police will use a radio-equipped autogyro tomorrow as a "bird dog" to point traffic snarls on the routes to and from the Army and Navy football game at Municipal Stadium.

To facilitate movement of the anticipated crowd of 102,000, four-lane Broad Street, the city's principal artery, will be restricted to one-way traffic before and after the game.

Both greatly desiring a victory to put a sparkling climax to a dull season, the Maryland and Washington and Lee elevens meet at 2 p. m. today at College Park in what promises to be a close-fought, if not well-played, football game.

The Washington and Lee squad arrived here last night to enjoy a good rest before the game, and the school's 60-piece band is to follow this morning. Coupled with Maryland's 70-piece unit, the Generals' band should be able to provide an expected crowd of 7,500 with plenty of music.

Maryland Is Underdog

Maryland, coming off an upset victory over Rutgers—its first major triumph of the season—will rate a slight underdog to the visitors who, though not bragging, boast a decidedly superior record. The Generals beat Hampden-Sydney, 26 to 0; the week before H.-S. jolted the Terps, 7 to 6; licked Richmond, 3 to 0, and played close ball games with George Washington and West Virginia—which beat Kentucky.

Lately however, the team which is partly coached by Riley Smith, former Redskins' quarterback star, has been anything but sensational. As a matter of fact the Generals have been outgeneraled, if not outplayed, four successive times. V. P. I. started their demise with a 21-0 victory, and since W. & L. has been kicked around by West Virginia (12-7), Virginia (20-6), and Sewanee (25-13).

However, the Generals will be in better shape for Maryland than in their past three or four ball games. Capt. Jack Mangan, All-State center in 1939, and Junie Bishop, one of the team's leading backs, will be making their first appearances since the Virginia game November 8.

Terps Start Same Club

Maryland will start the same line-up that opened its 14-7 surprise victory over Rutgers November 21 in Baltimore, but W. & L.'s starting eleven will be considerably different than that which began last week's game with dear old Sewanee.

Two of the Terrapins best football players in recent years—Quarterback Joe Murphy and Center Bob Smith, will be bowing out today unless Maryland gets a bowl bid. And that is not likely.

Dick Pinck to Miss Battle Against Terps

Lexington, Va., Nov. 29 (AP).—A doctor's diagnosis of arthritis of the feet, attributed to infected tonsils, today placed Dick Pinck, star football and basketball player for Washington and Lee, out of athletic competition for at least a month.

The Generals' grid squad departed this afternoon for tomorrow's game with Maryland at College Park, leaving the flashy halfback behind to have his tonsils removed.

While Football Coach Tex Tilson mourned the loss of Pinck in the season's finale with the Terps, Basketball Coach Harold (Cookie) Cunningham was even more gloomy. Pinck, All-State forward for the past two years, was counted on to lead the W. and L. five's offensive this season, which opens in 10 days.

A phenomenal shot-maker, Pinck led the team in scornig for two years and holds the all-time Southern Conference record of 34 points in one game. To make matters worse, Howard Dobbins, captain of the cage team, is nursing an injured knee.

McNeill Is Upset By Frank Guernsey

Montevideo, Nov. 29 (AP).—Donald McNeill, of Oklahoma City, United States national tennis champion, was upset by his countryman, Frank Guernsey, of Orlando, Fla., in the semifinal round of the Uruguayan championships today. The score of the surprising match was 7—5, 4—6, 6—4.

Dorothy May Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif., added the Uruguayan women's singles title to the Argentine championship she recently won at Buenos Aires, when she defeated her teammate on the touring North American squad, Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Cooke, 6—4, 7—9, 6—3.

William-Mary Names Bill Goodlow Captain

Williamsburg, Va., Nov. 29 (AP).—Bill Goodlow, of Springdale, Pa., will captain next year's William and Mary football team.

Goodlow, whom Coach Carl Voyles termed the best center in the State, succeeds Charles Gondak, All-State end his last two years as a varsity competitor.

'Bama Battles Miss. Staters For Bowl Bid

By the Associated Press

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Nov. 29.—With an Orange Bowl invitation as the almost certain prize for the victor, two Southeastern conference powerhouses—Alabama and Mississippi State—will meet here tomorrow before a homecoming day throng of 22,000.

And, in case Vanderbilt should slip up on Tennessee, the winner would also grab off the Southeastern conference championship. Alabama enters the game with four conference wins and a 27-12 loss to Tennessee. Mississippi State has won all its games except the 7-7 tie with Auburn.

Two standout triple-threat halfbacks, Jimmy Nelson for Alabama and Harvey Johnson for State, will carry most of the offensive hopes.

The game was rated a toss-up by the chance-takers, with Alabama's advantage in weight and the added incentive of a homecoming crowd making up for State's greater experience and better physical condition.

Former Major Leaguer Named Health Director

Toledo, Ohio, Nov. 29 (AP).—r. John L. Lavan, health commissioner of Grand Rapids, Mich., and former big league baseball player, today was named Toledo health director at a salary of $8,000 yearly. He comes here early in January. Dr. Lavan played with both the St. Louis Browns and Cardinals.

American Ski Patrols Sought For War Work

By the Associated Press

La Crosse, Wis., Nov. 29.—Organization of America ski patrols into national defense forces was discussed tonight at a meeting of Army officers and representatives of the National Ski Association.

The meeting preceded the annual convention of the ski association and will continue through Saturday and Sunday.

Lieut. Col. N. M. Walker and Lieut. Col. C. E. Curtis, of Washington, were the Army's representatives at the defense conference. J. Ross Laraway, of Toronto, was the Canadian Amateur Ski Association's representative.

Ski association leaders said preliminary plans for the defense program called for heaviest training of ski troops in the Central States, principally at Camp Custer, Mich.

Shoulder Separation Benches Hockey Player

Herb Foster, of the Rangers' Philadelphia farm, has been called in as a utility man until Shibicky returns to action. Lynn Patrick will take over Shibicky's place on the Neil Colville-Mac Colville line.

Youth Is Keynote of First Coolidge High Court Team

15-Year-Olds Make Up Club Starting Season Dec. 17 Under Julian Colangelo

By Bill Burnett

A lot of other things may worry him, but there is one basketball coach in the city who is already sure graduation won't rob him of players next year.

He is Julian Colangelo, the soft-spoken former cage teacher at Anacostia who has undertaken a similar task at the District's newest high school, Calvin Coolidge. Reason for his certainty about 1941-42 is that none of the candidates for this year's team are seniors.

As a matter of fact, Colangelo will be sending a team averaging less than 15 years of age out to do battle in the Fifth and Sheridan Street school's first taste of athletic competition on December 17.

The youth of his budding cagemen bothers Colangelo not at all.

"I keep thinking about next year," he said yesterday. "When everybody else is worrying about filling vacancies caused by graduation, I'll have my team intact. Getting your boys young, teaching them your way of playing the game, and having them together for several years is pretty important in high school coaching."

Not in High Series

"Coolidge won't be in the inter-high series this year," he continued, "mainly because we wouldn't have a chance in our first season. But we will play a 16-game schedule, including home-and-home games with three public school teams. I may be slightly biased, but I have an idea we'll do very well, despite our limitations."

The biggest limitation at Coolidge, Colangelo reveals, is the fact that it has no hoops or backboards in its spanking new gym. It's a somewhat larger layout than that at Anacostia, with all modern improvements, but to date the above prime requisites of a basketball court have not been installed.

Ignoring this, Coolidge cagemen have been working out for four weeks on Paul Junior High's floor in preparation for their opener with Woodward School. More than 60 youngsters turned out for the first practice, indicating a warm interest in the team, but since then that number has been sliced to 20 by Colangelo and Sherman Rees, newcomer from Brooklyn, who will handle the junior varsity five.

Two More Dates Sought

Tech, Wilson and Anacostia appear on the schedule of the new public school five, each for two games. Bethesda, Woodward and Landon are also down for a pair of clashes, while St. Albans and Richard Montgomery, of Rockville, will be met only once on the home floor. Two more dates are being sought.

"Give us reasonable luck," Colangelo confides," and not the sort that has forced Bill Buckner, one of our better prospects, out of uniform for a month with a dislocated shoulder and we'll do all right. We can expect fine material out of Paul Junior High, where Clint Price is teaching the boys a lot about basketball. You can expect us to pull a lot of surprises."

Past Records Go For Naught as Georgians Meet

By the Associated Press

Athens, Ga., Nov. 29.—All the records of past performances can be tossed to the wind tonight, for they don't count in the annual dogfight that brings together the Cracker State's ranking football machines—Georgia Tech's Yellow Jackets and the Georgia Bulldogs.

Rain or shine—and a near-perfect day was in prospect—these two gridiron teams, kicked around pretty much during the past stages of the campaign, will renew their ancient rivalry in Sanford Stadium tomorrow to the cheers or close to 25,000.

For one reason or another, Georgia's Bulldogs were installed a slight favorite over the foe from Atlanta, but the history of many previous duels between these rivals of 47 years' standing shows it doesn't pay to depend too strongly on the dope for this argument.

Vols, With Eye On Rose Bowl, Battle Vandy

Tennessee Is Anxious For Another Shot At Coast Champions

By the Associated Press

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 29.—Ever mindful of their traditional battle with Vanderbilt tomorrow, Tennessee's Volunteers let it be known today in no uncertain terms that they are itching for another crack at the Rose Bowl.

The undefeated and untied Vols, who need only a triumph over the Commodores to round out their third successive perfect regular season, are anxious for a chance to try to redeem the poor showing they made last New Year's Day in bowing to Southern California, 0-14.

"Of course we'd like to go back to California and try to redeem ourselves," said a senior member of the Tennessee squad who already has performed in the Rose and Orange Bowls.

"We were a crippled team out there last winter and we'd like nothing better than an opportunity of proving we are better than that score indicated."

This player's sentiments were echoed by virtually every one of the 35 players here for the joust with Vanderbilt, a 48-year-old rival and always one of Tennessee's toughest foes.

Those who would comment on the Bowl subject hastened to add, however, that they would welcome a bid to the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans if they are not beckoned to the West Coast for a return engagement.

Tennessee was regarded as a certainty for the Sugar Bowl until Texas trampled the mighty Texas Aggies yesterday and knocked the Bowl picture into a cocked hat.

Maj. Bob Neyland, crafty coach of the Volunteers, brushed aside Bowl inquiries and centered his thoughts on the immediate task—conquering Vanderbilt.

"We are expecting the toughest game of the season tomorrow," he declared. "We were lucky to beat Vanderbilt last year and I'll be satisfied with any kind of victory tomorrow."

Despite his silence on the Bowl topic, it was understood Neyland had dispatched one of his assistants to Berkeley, Calif., to scout Stanford against California tomorrow.

Final Event Victory Wins for Red Team

The final event on the program decided the Y. M. C. A.'s interssquad swimming meet last night in the home pool, the Reds finally winning by a 35-31 count over the Blues.

Each team won four first places in the Y's final tuneup before a dual meet with the Baltimore K. of C. on December 11.

Bill Dudley Elected Captain of 1941 Virginia Eleven

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 29.—William M. (Bill) Dudley, junior quarterback star from Bluefield, was elected captain of the University of Virginia's 1941 football team today.

The 18-year-old 170-pound backfield performer figured in 14 of Virginia's 18 touchdowns during the 1940 season, scoring 5 and passing for 9.

He is a member of the Sigma Epsilon Fraternity and of a number of student honorary societies.

40,000 to See Boston College, Holy Cross Play

Eagles Gambling With Bowl Chances In Annual Class

By the Associated Press

Boston, Nov. 29.—The Boston College Eagles one of the Nation's four undefeated and untied major football teams, will be gambling with their chances for one of the more important bowl game invitations tomorrow when they engage the Holy Cross Crusaders, their traditional rivals, before a sell-out crowd of 40,000 at Fenway Park.

Few experts admit, however, that Frank Leahy's powerful forces are taking much of a risk against the Crusaders, who are about to close their most unsuccessful campaign in many years. Three times before, since 1919 the Eagles have gone through their preliminary seasons without suffering a setback and then went on to hold the Crusaders scoreless in their climactic game.

Once, however, in 1926, the last season the late Maj. Frank Cavanaugh coached at Boston College, the unbeaten Eagles had to be content with a scoreless tie with their ancient rivals. The invincible Eagles of 1920 and 1928 wound up with 14-6 and 19-0 triumphs over Holy Cross.

Leahy, for sentimental reasons, has named a starting line-up that includes ten seniors and Mike Holovak, the sophomore fullback. Although Gene Goodreault, the star right end, was unable even to dress for today's final workout in the Tufts College gymnasium, he will be in for the opening kickoff.

Holy Cross, which has been improving gradually since it bowed to Brown, Colgate and Mississippi, might be rated slightly higher than a hopeless longshot if it could use Tommy Sullivan, the triple-threat sparkplug, who also missed last year's objective game because of injuries.

Bob Feller in for Busy Week-End Schedule

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—Bobby Feller, who seems to show about as much speed getting around during the off season as he puts on his fast ball when he's hurling for the Cleveland Indians, came to New York today to see his fellow Iowan, Lee Savold, fight Billy Conn at Madison Square Garden.

From here Feller plans to go to Philadelphia for the Army-Navy football game tomorrow, then to Chicago for the International Livestock Convention. He hopes to find time to stop off at Sandusky, Ohio, for some duck hunting, too.

ernment reservation, each bearing "Beat Army" or words to that effect.

There is widespread confidence here tonight that the Tars will come through victors over their rivals. The staff of coaches headed by "Swede" Larson who left last night with the players guarded the predictions over the outcome of the game, and the same was true of others connected with the Naval School. Tonight Rear Admiral Wilson Brown, superintendent of the academy, was asked for his opinion as to the outcome of the battle, but likewise would not make a definite forecast. Said he, "All I wish to say is that we all look forward to a fine game."

Five special trains will convey the regiment of nearly 2,600 midshipmen, largest personnel in the history of the academy, to tomorrow's game, leaving here at intervals of five minutes between 8 and 8:25 o'clock. In addition, there will be another "special" containing naval officers, members of their families and civilians, fans of Annapolis numbering more than 700, so that Annapolis will be represented by something like 4,000 spectators, as many others left here yesterday, or are making overnight jaunts by automobile.

The middies' specials are due to reach the Municipal Stadium between 11:35 and noon. There they will join the Corps of West Point Cadets over 1,700 strong and participate in a massed parade preceding the game. The kick-off is scheduled for 1:30 p. m. Then the Cadets and Middies will take their places in the stands as the combined Army and Navy bands play the National Anthem. The parade and the band demonstration are unprecedented stunts in the history of the inter-service classic, these features having been arranged to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the gridiron contests between the two academies.

Elks Skeet Club Has Turkey Shoot

The Elks Skeet Club will stage its second Turkey Shoot of the season tomorrow at the club's range located on Tom O'Donnell's Farm on the Marlboro Road. Action will start at 11 a. m. and President Ralph Murdock and his associates will put up the targets and let contestants bang away in sets of ten with big juicy birds as the prizes. In addition to the turkey shooting, the club members will vie at skeet. The public is invited.

Sisto Pilots Flying Easy to Victory at Bowie Track

Washington Jockey Wins Bayard Purse

Winner Pays $24.90 Price; Rough Biscuit Wins Lob Cabin Race; Taylor Escapes Injury

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Bowie, Md., Nov. 29.—Apprentice Jockey Ricco Sisto, a Washington boy who rode his first race at Charles Town last May, gave a journeyman's exhibition of riding here this sunny afternoon to win The Bayard Purse, featuring the Friday program. With J. C. Ellis' Flying Easy doing the running, Sisto rode to the wire three parts of a length in front of Mrs. E. Graham Lewis' Dark Mischief with Jockey H. Lindberg up. Dark Mischief barely saved the place money in a blanket finish with Mrs. F. Scully's Ponty and C. Stern's Poindexter. Ponty took the show money.

Sisto drove Flying Easy through on the inside to get to the front and slaved off Dark Mischief's bids going away. Like most of today's winners, Flying Easy was a long shot and paid $24.90. A dozen 2-year-olds competed and the winner was clocked in 1:13 3-5 for the six furlongs.

The Hilltop Log Cabin trophy, another sprint test, and located fifth on the program, went to J. Yancey Christmas, owner and trainer of Rough Biscuit. His 3-year-old colt took command early but Apprentice H. Claggett rode overconfidently at the end. City Talk closed with a rush and Jockey Henri Mora almost whipped the gelding into taking the purse, missing by a head margin. Trysak was a tiring third after setting most of the pace. Rough Biscuit kept the long shot parade rolling by paying $19.80.

Jockey W. L. Taylor, leading rider at the meeting, escaped serious injury in a spectacular spill in the first race. Taylor was aboard Mack's Hope and was thrown soon after the start when crowded. The track ambulance rushed to the scene. Taylor rode back, but examination showed he was only bruised on his right leg. He gave up his mount in the second race but resumed riding in the third event.

A pair of long shots teamed to produce a $275.30 mutuel in the daily double. D. J. Sullivan's Jerisa was a surprise winner in the first race, defeating Cherriko, Sea Foam and nine others. Jockey Charley Friedman rode the winner, which paid $31.30.

Mrs. M. Miller's Centerville, paying $18.40, put the finishing touches on the twin wager. The colt, capably handled by Jockey Danny Madden, came to the wire in front of Kimesha and Aristocracy. Madden took the son of St. Brideaux to the top early and kept him there. Kimesha rallied, but not soon enough to seriously menace the winner.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 29 (AP).—Attempts to continue the wheat market's recent rally came to naught today when prices backed down after an early advance that reached ¾-cent.

Closing prices were ¼ to ¾ lower than yesterday, with December, 88⅜@88¾, and May, 86@86¾. Brokers blamed the late setback on lack of support from milling and baking trade buyers as well as little interest by commercial and professional dealers and speculators. There was no aggressive selling, and, in the absence of any worthwhile trade developments, most of the operations represented spreading and switching of hedges along with scattered realizing sales.

CORN—Closed ⅛ to ⅜ lower; December, 63¾; May, 61⅞@62. Oats, ⅜ off to ⅛ up. Soybeans, ⅛ to 1 cent down. Rye, ⅜ to ½ lower and lard unchanged to 5 lower.

Early wheat strength was derived largely from scattered purchases credited to mills, but there were no signs of material expansion of this type of business, which has been dull the past three weeks. Wichita reports indicated some flour orders might have been booked at prices ranging 3 to 15 cents under present levels.

Sales in the week ended November 16 had been 1 per cent above a year ago, and the average gain over last year for the four weeks ended November 23 was 5 per cent.

Cotton Futures

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—Uncertainty over the 1941 farm program in the cotton futures market today contributed to moderate pressure in distant deliveries. The final range was unchanged to 5 points lower.

Hedging, lately small, increased but neither buyers or sellers pressed their position to cause a decisive trend.

Worth Street textile dealers reported business was confined mainly to moderate demand for sheetings and other coarse goods to cover Government orders.

Exports Thursday, 15,126 bales; season so far, 478,515. Port receipts, 22,624. Port stocks, 3,199,207.

New York Dry Goods

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—Woolen goods prices continued strong due to general tightness in the market. Cotton goods sheetings moved in moderate volume at advances of ¼-cent a yard for certain odd lots of this type. Occasional Government orders also were executed in coarse goods. Rayon, combination yarn cloths met fair demand while reasonable quantities of spun challis were moved. Silk prices continued unchanged in a dull market.

Sales were reported on the basis of the following quotations for immediate delivery: Print cloths, 38½, 64x60s, 5.35; 39s, broad cloths, 37, 100x60, 6.10. 7½ sheetings, 17, 48x48, 4.00. 6¼@6¾; combed lawns, 40, 76x72, 9.00. 7.

Backlogs Soar, Textile Mills Push Output

New Hands Trained With Skilled Labor Shortage Reported

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 29.—The Nation's textile mills are "putting on the heat" at every usable loom to raise production to the point where heavy Government and civilian demands for fabrics of all sorts can continue to be handled with dispatch, Worth Street reported today.

Textile district observers said the huge Government defense program and heavy civilian buying had resulted in withdrawal of some woolen piece goods producers from the market. In the cotton textile field, mill operators were bucking skilled labor shortages at many points by training new hands.

Three shifts per day, putting production on a 24-hour basis, have been adopted at many textile plants and are being installed at others as fast as personnel can be assembled.

The Government's big demand is for goods for the Army—woolen blankets, uniforms, coats and socks, and, in the cotton goods sector, materials are being sought for sheets, shirts, underwear and summer socks. With the national income this year expected to approach $75,000,000,000, the biggest since 1929, sharply increased civilian demand next year for apparel is anticipated and supplies are being sought accordingly.

A large number of woolen goods manufacturers, with the spring and summer output sold up, are reported virtually out of the market, textile observers say. Most other plants, it is added, find themselves in a position where it is possible to choose contracts submitted and deliveries before April, 1941, are practically impossible.

Woolen goods prices are reported strongly upward, with buyers paying full asking prices.

Retail Volume Hits 1940 Peak During Week

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—Stimulated by cold weather demand for heavy apparel and the start of the Christmas shopping season, buying at retail stores this week hit top 1940 rates and dollar volume averaged 8 to 10 per cent above a year ago for the country as a whole, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

At some Midwestern cities business averaged as much as 30 per cent above last year, with the average 12 to 16 per cent. In the South the year-to-year advance was 9 to 14 per cent, but in the Southwest snow and ice storms reduced the margin of gain to 5 to 10 per cent. New England sales topped the like week last year by 6 to 8 per cent, the East by 8 to 12 per cent, Northwest 4 to 9 per cent and the Pacific Coast 7 to 9 per cent.

"Retailers had one of the best weeks this year as shoppers began their seasonal Christmas buying in earnest," the credit agency said. "Stores were particularly gratified with the spread of demand and with the continued interest in better-grade merchandise."

Md. Telephone Calls, Stations Rise Sharply

Baltimore, Nov. 29 (AP).—Maryland Telephone users made more than 42,451,000 calls last month, the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. told the Public Service Commission today.

The company reported the total represented an increase of nearly 13 per cent compared with calls made in October, 1939.

A total of 299,760 telephones were in service throughout the State as of October 31—an increase of 22,303 over those in use a year before. The company's monthly report showed net income of $286,603 for the month, representing $1,794 less than for October, 1939.

Carnegie-Illinois Promotes E. E. Moore

Stocks Teeter Indecisively, Close Uneven; Tax Worries Overshadow Earnings News

New York, Nov. 29.—Indecision continued to grip the stock market today and, after an ealy feeble attempt at a rally, prices backed down to an irregular close. Steels, aircrafts, motors and shipbuildings were out in front with fractional advances in the forenoon but some of these faltered at the last and finished behind minus signs.

Utilities were soft from the start, with consolidated Edison and public service of New Jersey dipping to new bottoms for the year. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 43.8.

Dealings, slack the greater part of the proceedings, picked up occasionally and transfers of 528,035 shares topped Thursday's volume of 472,440.

Principal market stumbling blocks cited by brokers included worries over tax problems and the position of England in the war. Business news, highlighted by favorable dividend and earnings statements, still was pleasing but apparently was losing some of its speculative stimulus.

Both United States Steel and Bethlehem ended slightly under water, although it was believed next week's mill operations would hold at record high levels with shipments well below orders. General Motors clung to a modest gain but Chrysler was down a shade despite a jump in this week's automotive production to the highest mark for any week since midsummer 1937. Merchandising stocks got nowhere notwithstanding a brisk upturn in this week's retail spending.

Among gainers were New York Shipbuilding, International Mercantile Marine, Paramount, New York Central, Youngstown Sheet, Boering, United Aircraft, Eastman Kodak, du Pont, Kennecott, American Telephone and United States Gypsum.

Secondary railroad loans made a late stab at recovery in the bond department.

Aluminum of America edged forward in the Curb as this company's strike was settled. Improved also were Bath Iron Works, Creole Petroleum, Gulf Oil, E. W. Bliss, Bell Aircraft and New Jersey Zinc. The turnover here was around 127,000 shares versus 120,000 in the previous session.

Auto Output In Week Sets New 1940 Top

128,783 Assembled, Best Record Since 1937 Summer

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Nov. 29.—Production of the automobile plants reached a new 1940 high this week, Ward's Reports, Inc., said today in estimating the output at 128,783 cars and trucks. Assemblies last week numbered 102,340. Last year at this time 93,638 vehicles were completed.

This week's production volume has not been surpassed since midsummer of 1937.

With an output of approximately 500,000 units indicated for November, Ward's said, the industry has completed more than 1,000,000 vehicles during the October-November period. There have been only three previous two-month periods of this magintude since 1929.

Figures tabulated by R. L. Polk & Co. and announced today show that 2,779,586 new passenger cars and 478,591 trucks were licensed in the United States in the first ten months of 1940.

In the same period last year registrations totaled 2,175,262 passenger cars and 408,002 commercial vehicles.

Financial Writers Lampoon Bigwigs; Willkie Is Guest

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—This happened tonight while 1,100 financial, business and government leaders laughed:

One of Wall Street's best known firms added Santa Claus to its partnership.

The Democrats-for-Willkie moved to a tropical island.

Railroad securities holders met in a hobo "jungle."

These and other extraordinary feats were accomplished by the New York Financial Writers Association, engaged in its annual task of ridiculing Wall Street, its inhabitants and anyone else considered a likely target, at its dinner and "Financial Follies of 1940."

A guest of the show, staged in the Hotel Astor, was Wendell Willkie, whose candidacy for the Presidency was predicted at last year's "Financial Follies." Willkie was given a chance to speak after the audience had seen him mimicked on the stage, but his remarks were "off the record."

3 Staple Markets 'Licensed' to Deal In Fats and Oils

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department yesterday designated three commodity exchanges—the Chicago Board of Trade, the New York Produce Exchange and the New Orleans Cotton Exchange—as contract markets authorized to conduct trading in futures in fats and oil.

The Chicago Board of Trade was authorized to trade in soy beans, lard and cottonseed oil, the New York Produce Exchange in cottonseed oil, soy bean oil and tallow and the New Orleans Cotton Exchange in cottonseed oil.

This action was taken under the Page amendment to the Commodity Exchange Act, which becomes effective December 5. The amendment places futures trading in all fats and oils, including lard, tallow, cottonseed oil, peanut oil, soy bean oil, cottonseed meal, cottonseed, peanuts, soy beans and soy bean meal under jurisdiction of the Commodity Exchange Administration.

10 a. m., WRC—Henry Hull makes his fourth appearance on that popular Saturday morning dramatic program, Lincoln Highway. Appropriately, his sketch is called "The Return."

10:30, WRC—Virginia Wells, who has carved a niche for herself over Harrisonburg, Virginia's, WSVA, takes to the N. B. C. network program, the National Children's Frolic.

1, WJSV—Columbia is first to pick up the Army-Navy football game at Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium. WRC joins 15 minutes later. WMAL comes in at 2. Both WRC and WMAL will insert talks between 2:35 and 2:50 by the coaches of three undefeated teams. WJSV promises a news period at 2:30.

1:30, WMAL—Agile-tongued Ilka Chase flits from grand opera with Mrs. Lauritz Melchior, wife of the Metropolitan tenor, to soap opera drama with writer Elain Sterne Carrington during luncheon at the Waldorf.

4, WJSV—The Heroes of Democracy student series salutes Benjamin Banneker, Negro mathematician and maker of the first All-American clock. The players are from Armstrong High School, while the singers are from Howard University's Glee Club.

5:30, WRC—Students of the Curtis Institute of Music offer a Beethoven Duo for Woodwinds and Mozart's Quartet in D (K. 285).

6, WJSV—New program: Report to the Nation. This is a new CBS feature, dramatizing both normal and unusual functions of the American Government as related to current news events. Airs over Coast-to-Coast network from the Wardman Park's Little Theater.

7, WJSV—"Is Labor Peace Possible?" This timely question is discussed on the People's Platform by Louis Waldman, prominent labor counsel who represents both the A. F. of L. and C. I. O.; Associate Professor Lois MacDonald, of New York University; Daniel J. Sullivan, an electrician of the A. F. of L., and Raymond C. Smith, a watch worker of the C. I. O.

8:30, WRC—That madly daft show, Truth or Consequences takes its unpredictable doings to the stage of Cleveland's Palace Theater.

9:35, WMAL—A slight indisposition keeps Arturo Toscanini from conducting the N. B. C. Symphony. Hans Wilhelm Steinberg replaces him with this program: "Tragische Overture," Brahms; Symphony No. 2 in D minor, Dvorak; Prelude and Liebstod, "Tristan und Isolde" and Overture to "Tannhauser," Wagner.

10:15, WJSV—Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., son of the President and Betsy Barton, daughter of the Republican Representative from New York and Dr. Frank Kingdon, executive director of the Citizen's Educational Service, take part in a special broadcast titled "A Roll Call of American Youth for Democracy."

Listen!
with Glynn

(WJSV's Sports Commentator Arch McDonald today pinch-hits for Paul Glynn.)

Just before beginning a broadcast, I'm always reminded of the importance of speaking in a clear-cut way by a letter I once received:

"After listening to the wireless, which is what we call radio in England, I am more confused than ever about baseball. I am thinking of giving up the whole project and devoting myself to some simpler American sport.

"In the few games I witnessed, the diamond was quite dry. Yet you always talk of its wetness and mention pools of water. And animals, too. Upon my soul, you forever gabble of poultry. You keep reiterating: 'The ducks are on the pond!'

"What does 'no soap' mean? Why should cleanliness be connected with baseball? I presumed the players bathed; they looked quite clean and spotless in their flannels.

"Yesterday, I heard that a batsman had been struck by a 'bean ball.' He 'died' at center base. First soap bubbles, then bean balls, then death. Frightful calamity! Yet, I saw nothing in the obituaries about this tragedy.

"And I heard of a batsman wanting to fight with an arbitrator. This gentleman told his abuser to 'take a shower bath.' Why? I don't think personal hygiene should enter into it, do you? A vulgar retort and damnably discourteous, too!"

"Yours in perplexity,"

Contract Bridge

It demands weirdly distorted bidding even between strangers to land in a seven-card trump suit at a grand-slam bid when a ten-card suit is available. But this is exactly what happened to Mrs. L. W. and partner when a psychic bid hit back with both barrels. The young woman must have possessed an amulet or charm, for, remarkable to report, the seven-card trump suit broke nicely, three-three, in the adversaries' hands and the contract was made.

Here are the cards and the bidding:

North
♠ Q 6 3
♡ A K Q J 9 8 6 4 2
♣ None

South
♠ A K 8 2
◇ K Q 10 8 5 3
♣ 10 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	3 ♠	3 ♣
4 ♠	Pass	7 ♡	Pass
7 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

The king of clubs was led; North trumped, led out spades and the hearts were good for the remaining tricks.

"My partner thought my spade bid was very bad, and I feel that even if this is true, he had no right to disturb the seven-heart contract. "What do you think?" asks the contributor.

A forcing bid of two hearts is North's best response to one diamond. South can also be criticized for taking out seven hearts to seven spades. A little reflection would indicate there was something false about North's bidding which had best be let alone. But no partner can be expected in the excitement of a grand slam to be especially imaginative or cool-headed.

IN THE FIGURE FLATTERING BRITISH LOUNGE AND CONVENTIONAL MODELS

We don't have to tell you that your appearance is one of your greatest assets. You already know it. This is just a reminder. And you know, too, from personal experience that a suit gives away its age by the tell-tale shine on the trouser seat, elbows and back of coat. A suit is only as old as its "shine", making it null and void.

How to avoid it? That's easy! Wear one of the advertised Wearlong Worsted 2-trouser suits by the celebrated House of Worsted-Tex. The bugaboo of shine, wear and wrinkles will disappear like fog in the sun. Now add in the second pair of trousers and the exclusive British Lounge model. You have a suit that rates four aces in value, in quality, in style and in fit. Single and double breasteds in British Lounge and also conventional models.
